AT LUNCHEON TWO DAYS BEFORE ASSASSINATION

Gen. Alvaro Obregon, President-elect of Mexico, greeted by a pretty cowgirl during a luncheon tendered him in Mexico City in celebration of his election, two days before his assassination. It was in a somewhat similar manner that the general was killed when the assassin asked him to view some sketches, then shot him six times in the back.

'Vince' O'Donnell Would Change His Name to Vincent Astor Donnell

Vincent A. O'Donnell of Newton, a big business executive, wants to change his name to Vincent Astor Donnell.

His brother, a Newton policeman, wants him to remain "as is."

This intriguing state of affairs in the O'Donnell family was disclosed today by petitions filed in Middlesex County courts.

Vincent A. O'Donnell of Newton and petitions for the change of name, while jacketed with white papers in the dockets in Patrolman O'Donnell's plea to the court to refuse his brother permission.

The man who would drop the O from O'Donnell is manager of a steel concern with offices in South Boston and lives on Allerton rd., Newton.

He declared that as an executive he hated to sign a lot of documents and papers and finds O'Donnell difficult to write. It would save time and lend to greater efficiency if his name were changed, he thinks.

His second reason for desiring the change is that there are so many O'Donnells in the Boston directory.

These are the only reasons cited. No mention is made as to what the middle initial in his name now stands for, whether or not it is Astor, or why he wants it to be Astor.

His brother's petition against the change gives no reason for his opposition.

KILLS 2 JAILORS AND BLOWS OUT OWN BRAINS AS HE FAILS TO ESCAPE

New York, July 20 (AP)—Faced with life imprisonment as a fourth offender under the Baumes laws, a prisoner in the Bronx County Jail killed two keepers in a desperate effort to escape and then shot and killed himself.

Armed with two revolvers he shot his way through two tiers of cells and when two shots fired into the lock of a steel door leading to a fire-escape failed to open a way to freedom, he blew out his brains.

The dead convict was John F. McCabe, 23 years old. His police record dated back 14 years. The two keepers he killed were Morris Srodowska and Daniel Horgan, neither of whom was armed. Srodowski had unlocked the cells on the fourth tier to give the convicts an evening exercise period, owing to the fact that those looking them in only two hours.

When he entered McCabe's cell the prisoner complained he was not feeling well. As the guard turned to unlock the next cell door McCabe placed a revolver against his shoulder and fired twice. Mortally wounded the keeper grasped McCabe around the legs and was dragged to the stairway landing in the lower floor. Here his grip was broken. Unlocking the door McCabe

Imperial Business Hoover's Health Students Then, and Now She Met the Ghoul

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1928, by Star Co.

IN HIS NEW BOOK Trotsky says imperialists of every nation will force a war on Russia because capitalist nations feel they must crush soviet Russia.

They don't feel that way. Big imperialism is really "big business." Big business, engaged in developing industry and making money, knows that war doesn't pay and doesn't want any war with Russia, especially. Fighting Russia is like fighting a feather bed. The deeper in you sink, the more you choke.

Imperialistic big business will sit quietly and watch Russian theorists fight each other—as when they threw out Trotsky.

Coolidge warned Hoover against overwork, urging him to watch his health. This writer warns Mr. Hoover against fast eating.

As a skilful engineer he would not allow any subordinate to treat a machine as he, Mr. Hoover, treats his own body.

His mind is working constantly. He eats absent-mindedly, in a hurry, never ceasing concentrated mental work.

In short, he lives as the late E. H. Harriman used to live. And only years of active outdoor life have saved him. When Harriman went to see the German doctors, they said if he had eaten slowly, instead of eating his luncheon on the desk while he worked, and especially if he had taken light beer with his meals, to relax, he would have lived many years longer.

Herbert Hoover won't take light beer. Perhaps the German doctors were wrong about that, anyhow. But he will live longer. If he can be persuaded to eat more slowly, and stop concentrated thinking, at least during meals.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., most generously, has given $2,000,000 for students' buildings in Paris, in the new "University City," built on the site of the old Paris wall.

In the days when Abelard lectured at the Paris University, eager students climbed at night to tall steeples and there, away from street shadows, read their books by moonlight.

They heard lectures before daybreak, in ice cold, stone rooms, their half-frozen fingers writing painfully.

Education is made easier.

Miss Katherine Locke of Youngstown, Ohio, traveled miles and miles over the sands of Sahara thinking the sun would bring back her voice that she lost. IT DID.

She visited the Ghoul of Marakesh, if you know who he is, in a dwelling 3000 years old in the Atlas mountains. The Ghoul probably knows as little about us as we know about him.

More interesting to many Americans, Miss Locke saw at

IMPLORES HIS CAPTORS TO KILL HIM AT ONCE FOR SLAYING OBREGON

Mexico City, July 20—"Kill me now and have done with it," is the cry of the assassin of President-elect Obregon, when visited in his dungeon cell at police headquarters.

The young killer, Juan Leon Toral has repeatedly thus given expression to resignation to his fate since being locked up.

Full details of the investigation into the murdering of Obregon were expected momentarily today.

Gen. Antonio Rios Zertuche, inspector-general of police, announced he was concluding the investigation.

In addition, the general said the youth would be given trial in civil court. It was expected here that the trial would be rushed to a speedy conclusion, especially when Toral has confessed, and that the execution would take place within a few days.

CHARLESTOWN POLICE NAB BOY SPEED KING

An impromptu auto racing exhibition staged for the amusement of hundreds of persons who lined the curbing on Bunker Hill st. had its climax early today in the arrest of a youth, who gave his name as Daniel E. Hoban, 17, of Mystic st., Charlestown.

According to the police Hoban has been thrilling the crowds almost nightly with daring exhibitions of racing skill in stolen machines.

Sergt. William J. Harrow with Officers Flanagan, McDonald and Kearney of the "flying squadron" mingled with last night's crowd which lined both sides of Bunker

MILLION IN RUM CARGO SEIZED ON HALIFAX SHIP

New York, July 20 (AP)—A cargo of alleged pre-war rye whiskey, estimated to be worth $1,000,000 at retail, was seized today by customs agents on the Red Cross liner Nerissa.

The contraband was in kegs under pickled herring which had been brought in large barrels from Halifax, N. S.

An agent of the appraisers stores was checking the cargo to be delivered to truckmen late last night when he found a ten-gallon keg of whiskey at the bottom of the first barrel of herring he examined. A hurried search showed that a similar keg was apparently at the bottom of each of the 50 fish barrels.

Edward Gusconi, a truckman, was detained when he called for the first load of herring. He was released on bail as a material witness. Smith and Anderson, Manhattan fish dealers, were the consignees of the fish and said they received shipments regularly from Halifax.

KELLOGG ANTI-WAR PLAN IS ACCEPTED BY JAPAN

Tokio, July 20—Japan today announced unconditional acceptance of the American anti-war treaty. The foreign office handed a note to United States Chargé D'Affaires Neville stating that Japan will sign the pact without reservations.

All but one of the 14 nations to which Secretary Kellogg submitted his treaty for the renunciation of war now have formally approved the Washington government of their willingness to join in the compact.

Czechoslovakia alone remains to be heard from and the State Department has learned through diplomatic channels that it may be expected to concur within a few days.

STRIKE BREAKERS IN AUTO ARE CLUBBED

New Bedford, July 20—A strike picket leaped on the running-board of a mill automobile and clubbed two strike-breakers today, causing a brief flareup that threatened to result in serious rioting, due to the tenseness of the situation.

With the mill owners and city officials at odds over the handling of the picket lines, and the importation of more strike-breakers in the near future suspected by the strikers, trouble is feared.

The two clubbed strike-breakers, Manuel Furtado and James Donahey, Jr., were on their way to work at the Nonquit mill when John Arruda, according to the police, jumped on the running board and wielded a club, injuring each about the head.

Arruda then fled and while police searched the vicinity for him a crowd of pickets followed them, jeering and booing. Arruda was found hiding and arrested.

The clash between city officials and mill operators resulted from a charge of "playing politics," leveled at the city powers by the owners. The charge was made by John Sullivan, president of the New Bedford manufacturers' association.

Mayor Ashley's terse answer to the charge is that he will continue to treat the striking mill operatives in accordance with the laws of Massachusetts, while Chief of Police McLeod wants somebody in authority

BABY GIVES LIFE FOR MOTHER AS HOME BURNS

The love of a tiny boy for his mother and his attempt to establish her safety, seared out today the life of little Wilfred Reid, 2½ years old during a fire that destroyed his home in Canton.

Little Wilfred was burned to death when he darted back into the burning building in a search for his mother, Mrs. Rupert Reid.

A few seconds before she had rushed out her three children, including Wilfred, and had gone back to rescue valuables—returning safely to the outside by the front.

When the Reid home at 2730 Washington st., in the Ponkapog section of Canton, had been reduced to ashes, the charred body of little Wilfred, who had been missing since his mother left him outside, was found in the ruins just outside the back door.

The building, a two-story frame wooden structure, with woodshed and storeroom attached, was valued at $5500.

Mrs. Reid was in the house with the three children when the fire started in the one-story shed.

The flames had spread to the main house before the mother became aware of the fire.

Gathering the three children, she raced them out the back door and around the house into the street.

There she left them and ran back into the house to recover her valuables.

It is believed that little Wilfred, remembering that he had emerged from the back door, went instinctively back there when he began a search for the mother.

The tiny body was found by firemen a few feet inside where the rear entrance had been.

U. S. WINS DAVIS CUP SINGLES FROM ITALY

By FREDERICK K. ABBOTT

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, July 20 (INS)—Playing without the services of their ace and team captain, Bill Tilden, the American Davis Cup tennis forces virtually declared their way into the challenge round with France by taking the first two singles matches in the interzone finals with Italy.

Francis T. Hunter, New York, and Johnny Hennessey, Indianapolis, scored the victories for America, each winning his singles match in straight sets.

Hunter won in hollow fashion from Gastini of Italy, who was substituted for Stefani, regular singles man, 6—1, 8—1 and 6—0.

Hennessey had slightly more difficulty with Baron de Morpurgo, Italian ace, but finally prevailed, 6—4, 7—5 and 8—2.

The victories of Hennessey and Hunter were scored with impressive finality and left no doubt in the minds of those present as to the ultimate outcome.

The Americans need only score one victory in the three matches remaining to meet the French in the challenge round for the famous grail of competition.

The performance today was the answer of the American team to the downfall of its champion and leader, Tilden, who was dropped from the team on the eve of the matches on charges of having violated the player writer rule at Wimbledon.

Tilden sat on the sidelines today and encouraged his former mates at all times.

The Americans, particularly Hennessey, seemed to have the sympathy of the gallery, which was mostly French. They cheered Johnny to a deafening echo for his sensational play in the second set where he refused to concede defeat after the baron had run the game to

SIX FACE DEATH FOR OBREGON SLAYING

Mexico City, July 20 (INS)—Half a dozen persons may pay the death penalty for the assassination of President-elect Obregon by Jose de Leon Toral. Toral and several accomplices will be placed on trial at an early date. A verdict of guilty will entail the death penalty at the hands of a firing squad.

GOVERNOR TRUMBULL ESCAPES IN AIR CRASH

New London, July 20 (AP)—Governor Trumbull escaped injury this morning at the new state airport at Groton when two planes came together while landing. There were three machines in the air, one of which was piloted by the governor.

In landing two of the planes came to earth safely but the third in some unexplained manner crashed into the one in which the governor had made the flight. Two mechanics on duty at the field suffered minor injuries. The planes were seriously damaged.

Immediately following the accident, the governor again took the air and stayed aloft about 20 minutes and upon landing lit a cigar and appeared none the worse for his experience.

Death Lurked Near Obregon When He Arrived in Mexico City Two Days Before He Was Shot Down

SLAIN PRESIDENT-ELECT AS HE ARRIVED IN CAPITAL FOR RECEPTION

Gen. Alvaro Obregon (indicated by arrow) shown on his arrival in Mexico City last Sunday from his home in the State of Sonora. He declined to ride in one of the luxurious fleet of automobiles placed at his disposal, preferring a seat on a huge motor truck that took him through swarms of cheering admirers. Obregon is shown wearing a large sombrero, with Ricardo Topete, president of the Mexican Congress, on his right, and Gens. Manzo and Cruz (the latter then chief of police) on his left.

WHEN ASSASSIN'S VICTIM REACHED HIS POLITICAL HEADQUARTERS

Tens of thousands of all classes of citizens foregathered in front of the building where the Obregonista headquarters are located in Mexico City when the ill-fated President-elect arrived in Mexico City to prepare for his inaugural. Thousands of the peasantry were transported in freight cars to the capital from outside districts to join in the welcome to the President-elect. Two days later he was shot dead as he sat at a banquet in his honor in a Mexico City suburb.

saint of Mexico, were arrested and their convent closed.

Police charge they were operating secretly in violation of the religious laws. They were held at police headquarters where Obregon's slayer occupies a dungeon cell.

The first political steps following the death of Obregon were taken when the Obregonista congressional bloc and the permanent congressional committee met and decided to postpone until July 30 the special session of Congress. At the same time, messages were sent to all State legislatures asking them to postpone all legislative action until that date.

Many interpreted President Calles' manifesto as indicating that he plans to retain the leadership which he had been expected to transfer to Gen. Obregon on Dec. 1, next. As the friendship between the two men was regarded as a sincere, close one, it is felt by some that this action on the part of the President will make the transition less difficult.

There are indications that Congress, when it meets will enact a transitory constitutional provision to handle the present situation. The President appears to have the undivided support of the majority of Congress.

Under these circumstances, the opinion prevails that the crisis almost precipitated by Obregon's death now is virtually no longer threatening.

SLAYER'S WIFE TAKEN

Complete identification of the slayer as Juan De Leon Toral came with the arrest of his entire family, including his wife, Senora De Toral told the police that her husband had been graduated from the Catholic seminary in Mexico City and had taught in a Catholic school for some time.

The young woman also added that he had been a devout Christian, and that he had been given absolution by a priest the day before the shooting of Gen. Obregon. The police immediately instituted a search for the priest.

President Calles, ruler of Mexico, and the slight youth whose pistol closed the career of Mexico's most conspicuous revolutionary leader, held a dramatic conference. Recalling that the Calles Government itself had begun the enforcement of the religious clauses of the revolutionary constitution.

The President demanded:

"Why did you kill Gen. Obregon instead of me?"

Without hesitation, the doomed youth replied:

"You are no longer a problem. Because you will be out of office before long. I killed Obregon because he said he would carry out your policies, which I understood to include mistreatment of the church. I want Christ to be king in Mexico."

Then came another pointed question:

"Did you think of your own fate?" Toral answered:

"I expected death there in the dining room, but, unfortunately, it was denied me. Kill me now. I have considered myself dead ever since I fired those shots into Obregon's back. What's the use of keeping me alive longer? I've said all I'm going to say."

CENSORSHIP LIFTED

President Calles continued to plead in vain for the names of persons with whom the youth was associated. Toral remained stubbornly silent. He insisted, also, that there was not "money enough in the universe" to induce him to kill Obregon, while he had acted, he said, because of his conviction that the slaying was best for the church.

Although in poor health, Toral shows nerves of iron. The caricatures of the slayer just before the shooting of the President-elect show that they were sketched with the steadiest hand

There no longer is any perceptible excitement on the streets of the capital. Reports from the country at large indicate similar conditions prevailing there. The censorship has been lifted

Hopes of Ca holic Clergy Defeated

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 20 (AP)—The Right Rev. Francis Canpon y Angeles, exiled auxiliary bishop of Oaxaca, Mex., in a statement here said the assassination of Obregon has defeated the hopes of Catholic clergy for the end of "religious persecutions" in Mexico.

"All of our hopes were centered in the more conciliatory spirit of the president-elect," the statement said.

"Obregon's death will leave all influence in the hands of those who wish to continue the persecution. It will of course be blamed on the Catholics as was the attempt on the life of Obregon a year ago. Four men were executed for that and afterwards were admitted to have been innocent.

"I am an old man who loves peace and loves his country. I scarcely can be blamed for wanting to go home. But I see no prospect ahead but that of an exile's grave in a land, which, though kind indeed, nevertheless is a place of exile to me."

7 Love Affairs for Each Married Man, Woman

New York, July 20 (INS)—Married men and women experience seven love affairs during a lifetime. The attachments usually precede the one which results in marriage, but the legal bond does not preclude later romance in many instances. These were the conclusions drawn from a questionnaire answered by 200 men and women and published in Harper's Magazine.

The 200 questioned admitted 1358 love affairs, 681 for the men and 677 for the women. Twenty-nine husbands and 49 wives let their affections stray after marriage.

Additional questions revealed that men begin their love affairs earlier, but women reach the peak of their romantic lives more rapidly. Women also carry their love affairs much later into life than men, it was reported.

SCOUTS CHURCH OBREGON 'PLOT'

New York, July 20—The theory that President-ect Obregon of Mexico was assassinated for religious reasons was discounted by William Flewellyn Saunders of 88 Robert ave., Forthchestar, who was for eight years secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Mexico City, and is a son of a Methodist minister in Georgia.

"Obregon had many enemies," said Saunders, who came out of Mexico in May, 1927, after he had been warned of the impending Gomez revolution. "Throughout his career, he was utterly ruthless in his treatment of his political opponents, and as a result, he was thoroughly hated in some quarters.

"The implication in President Calles' statement that the Catholic Church had a direct connection with the assassination is manifestly unfair, because the Catholics had no reason to expect anything but good treatment and an equitable adjustment of their difficulties under an Obregon regime.

"The Calles' regime has always tried to lay the blame for every rebellion, uprising, disorder and piece of banditry at the door of the Catholic Church."

Mexican Labor Pledges Co-operation With Calles

Mexico City, July 20 (AP)—The labor party, which had abstained from any demonstration regarding the assassination of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, except publicity to repudiate it, today accepted the call of President Calles for harmony and co-operation.

Labor leaders, who had maintained an expectant attitude pending police investigation into the slaying, made their announcement after Calles' manifesto had cleared them of any suspicion of being implicated.

The labor party notified the president that it would co-operate for a union of the revolutionary elements in accordance with the Calles' manifesto.

CHARLEY DOES HIS DUTY; COURT LOSES 'DAY OFF'

The court attaches down 'n Lynn will never forgive Charles Colby, who is president and board of directors of "The Colby Club," so exclusive an organization that members are admitted only by court order.

If he hadn't been for the executive ability and zeal toward duty displayed by President Colby, the entire court would have had a day off today, inasmuch as one of his club members was the only defendant.

President Colby is probation officer of Lynn court also and his probationers are the members of his club.

Yesterday, with raised umbrella, the court attache was strolling in Pleasant st. when he observed six of his club members standing on a corner.

"Hey—Charlie—let's take your umbrella," one of the six cried cheerily and Officer Colby, striding over, identified one John Kinnehan, who has no fixed address, and loaned him half the umbrella as far as police headquarters.

On a drunk charge, Judge Reeve gave Kinnehan today a suspended sentence at the State Farm.

As the lone defendant of the day was having his record taken again by Probation Officer Colby, the other court attendants gazed balefully at the lowered head of the man whose zeal for the best behavior of his club members had made them work.

to determine just how many pickets make a legal number.

The mill owners are up in arms. They declare that they have been passive for the 14 weeks of the strike, but now plan "an aggressive campaign" against the picketers.

"The mills will not be shut down," Sullivan said. "Workers will not be imported from anywhere else to operate them. We believe there are many workers who would return to their jobs, if they were not intimidated by picket lines so big, and crowds so large, as to frighten them.

"The picketing of homes is another method of intimidation, greater than the picketing of mill gates by hundreds, watched by thousands.

"For three months we closed the mills and sat back and said nothing. Now we are going to operate and see that those workers who want to go back to their jobs get protection."

In his statement Sullivan charged Mayor Ashley with failure to enforce either the spirit or the letter of the law.

"The mayor," he said, "has an opportunity similar to that offered in the Boston police strike, though perhaps in a slightly smaller way, but so far has failed.

"At the time Coolidge was called upon to act in the Boston police strike," he said, "he was subjected to the same political pressure that exists with our mayor today.

"He had the courage to handle the situation firmly, even though he was told that his action meant the ending of his political career.

"It is not necessary in this New Bedford situation that the mayor should take any aides in the controversy, and no one can justly say that he should.

"The only way to handle a situation of this sort is to anticipate disorder and to get it before it starts."

Bathhouses Did Big Business During the Hot Spell

Boston's clean. The past eight days, with their extreme heat, resulted in the establishment of new records for the number of persons who took advantage of the municipal bathhouses—275,811.

L st., Head House, Columbus Park and Savin Hill reported a total of 183,190 men and boys and 92,621 women and girls who patronized the bathhouses.

Figures for Charlestown, East Boston, North End, Freeport and Tenean beaches were not available, Chairman William P. Long of the Park Commission reported, but it is estimated they would increase the total 100 per cent.

Cabe ran downstairs. Horgan, keeper of the third tier, had heard the shots and ran for the stairs. Halfway up he met the escaping prisoner, who fired twice at close range, killing him instantly.

McCabe ran to a door which opens on a fire escape. Failing to budge it he fired two shots into the lock, then hearing the pounding of feet up the stairs, he turned his gun against himself and fell dead.

McCabe's police record dates back to 1914 when at the age of 11 he was sent to a protectory. He was last arrested June 19 of this year for participating in a $1700 payroll robbery.

He was believed to have been a drug addict, and according to his attorney, was losing his mind.

TURTLE COULD LIVE IN A LOG, BUT DID HE?

Turtle experts were divided in opinion today as to the possibility of a turtle living for many years imbedded in a livoak log.

Meanwhile the southern turtle found yesterday in such a log that had been submerged in a lake near Pensacola, Fla., for 73 years, was enjoying its new-found freedom at the Boston Navy Yard despite an injured nose.

The nose was sliced when the three-ton block of live oak was being cut preparatory to being shaped and installed in the U. S. frigate Constitution, under reconstruction.

William O'Brien, director of the city aquarium at South Boston, said he was not surprised at a turtle living in cramped quarters for any number of years, but the question of food was a puzzle.

HOW'D IT GET IN?

"Turtles, alligators and other reptiles often hibernate during a whole winter or an entire year," he said. "If it is true that this one was found, with no means of getting out, it simply means that some new knowledge will come from it. If they can 'dope'

Turtle interpreters — rally round! The world wants to know how "Sleepyhead Oaky," the entombed turtle, got into the three-ton block of live oak that was under water for 73 years in Florida.

For the best letter explaining how the turtle got into the huge oak log the Boston Evening American will pay $10—in a bill, gold piece, or even in turtles, if the writer prefers the rules that way. But you can't have the turtle, for (he, she, it) will be the mascot of the United State frigate Constitution when the ship is reconstructed.

Judges of the letters will be Rear-Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the Boston Navy Yard; Lieut. John Lord, U. S. N., in charge of the Constitution reconstruction work, and Park Commissioner William F. Long. Address your letters to "Sleepyhead Oaky," Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

GIRLS "STARVE FOR ART"

"WE'LL DIE TO WIN"

Mrs. Peggy O'Neil, daughter of the late William A. Stone, "the best governor Pennsylvania ever had," who, with her sister, was found living in a wretched barge.

EX-GOVERNOR'S 2 DAUGHTERS IN HOVEL

New York, July 20 (AP)—A determination to starve rather than give up her artistic career was voiced by Miss Isobel Stone, daughter of a former Governor of Pennsylvania, who, with her sister, recently was found living in poverty on a derelict barge off upper Manhattan.

Miss Stone said that at the death of her father, the late William A. Stone, coal operator, and often referred to as "the best Governor Pennsylvania ever had," it was found his estate, estimated at $3,000,000, had dwindled to practically nothing through stock market speculations.

"We were left in the house," she said, "but we had no food. We had to go to work, and we didn't know what work meant for it had never entered into our lives. We imagined that money grew on trees."

Miss Stone took up her abode in the rent-free barge more than a week ago with her younger sister, Mrs. Peggy O'Neil. She is a singer studying for an operatic career, while her sister is a sculptor.

She said her sister first got a job in a box factory while she obtained a place in a chorus, later becoming a singer. She has since appeared in Broadway shows and night clubs and also made her debut in opera. Sickness, however, interfered with her career.

Judge Stephen Stone, a half-brother, at Pittsburgh, said the plight of the two young women was due to their "strong headedness" in insisting on artistic career.

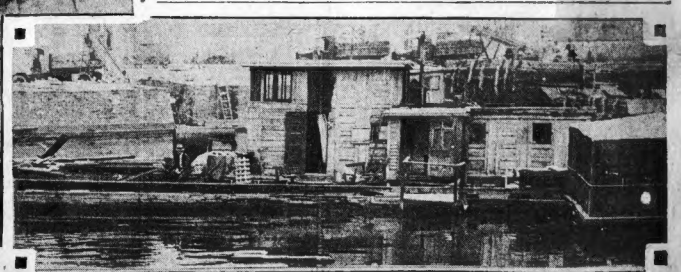
JOINS NAVY TO SEE THE WORLD

Having seen nothing but the inside of a log for 73 years, "Old Ironsides" has been adopted by the navy and he may yet sail the bounding main.



BE IT EVER SO HUMBLE, IT'S THE HOME OF "ART"

This is the barge "home" of Isobel Stone and her sister, Mrs. Peggy O'Neil, who would starve as artists rather than give up their art to accept aid from relatives or friends. Isobel is shown paddling to the barge off upper Manhattan. When their father died the $3,000,000 he was supposed to own was nothing. Isobel sings; Peggy is a sculptor.

HOOVER BACK IN HIS HOME STATE FOR FUNERAL

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, N. E. A. Staff Correspondent

Aboard Hoover Train, Sacramento, Cal., July 20—Herbert Hoover returned to his home state today on a mission of sorrow and with all "welcome home" festivities postponed until after the funeral of his father-in-law, Charles D. Henry.

The Henry obsequies will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of the Leland Stanford University, which both Mr. and Mrs. Hoover attended years ago.

Despite the cloud cast upon his homecoming by the death of his father-in-law, Hoover was elated at returning to his home state. He crossed the California state line shortly before midnight and expressed his gratitude at being "home." He had sat up in his private car for the event.

IN HIS HOME STATE.

"Every Californian crosses the state line with gratitude that God made him this home state," said Hoover. "I return this time with a deep sense of responsibility that I may add to her distinction in that task for which she has presented me to the nation."

Mrs. Hoover remained in strict seclusion aboard the train. Her sorrow at the loss of her father was increased by the fact she was prevented from being with him in his last days.

Hoover came back to his home state convinced he will win the states across the northern tier of country from Wisconsin and Illinois to the Pacific coast. He was told he would carry two so-called "doubtful" states, Montana and Nevada, thus making a clean sweep of the northwestern country.

ONE DISTURBING NOTE.

There was but one disturbing note sounded on the trip. It came at Elko, Nev. Hoover had stepped out on the rear platform to greet a crowd of 200 tanned and weather beaten westerners.

"Well, how are things coming along here," Hoover inquired. One plainsman garbed in overalls, immediately responded: "About the same as the rest of the country. We are starving." The nominee retorted without hesitating, "Well, this town looks a lot more prosperous today than it did 20 years ago, when I passed through it." Then Hoover added, "The livestock raisers are prospering according to the reports coming to me."

Coolidge Baits Line Twice; Lands 2 Fish In Single Cast

Superior, Wis., July 20 (AP)—President Coolidge not only is catching fish every time he goes out on the Brule but, on an average of every other day, he is performing the unusual feat of getting two trout on the cast.

He thrilled newspapermen and photographers on his fifty-sixth birthday, by pulling from the river two good sized fish on one throw of his line, but it was not known until today that he is repeating that stunt regularly by putting one fly on the line's dropper and the other on the end of the line.

The President fishes every day but Sunday.

LEGLESS FLIER FORCED DOWN IN 3 STATES, UNHURT

Passaic, N. J., July 20 (INS)—Morris R. "Dinger" Daugherty, legless and one-armed airplane pilot, flying from his home in New Martinsville, W. Va., to Roosevelt field, N. Y., was resting here today after getting lost several times and being forced down in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and on Long Island. He escaped injury.

Daugherty is said to be planning a transatlantic flight to Rome. He is county assessor of Wetzler county, West Virginia.

SMITH WOULD CONSOLIDATE U. S. BUREAUS

Albany, N. Y., July 20 (INS)—A complete overhauling of the federal government and consolidation and elimination of overlapping and useless bureaus, boards and commissions in the interest of economy and efficiency is planned by Gov. Al Smith in the event of his election to the presidency.

This was revealed by the governor to United States Senators Millard E. Tydings of Maryland and Harry B. Hawes of Missouri while guests at the executive mansion they said today.

"I want my campaign and my administration, if elected, to be constructive," the governor was quoted by Sen. Tydings as saying. "I do not want a campaign of mere criticism."

One of the outstanding achievements of Smith's four terms as governor is his reorganization in which he consolidated the 190 state bureaus and agencies into 18 main departments.

According to close friends he feels the same thing can be accomplished in the federal government but on a larger scale.

"I am convinced after my talk with Gov. Smith that in the event of his election he will not ask for any changes in the prohibition law that could be objectionable to believers in temperance and good government," Tydings said. "He doesn't want a flood of liquor in the country. What he does want is the use of common sense in its control."

Tydings said Gov. Smith declared several times during their conference:

"It's not a question of the wetness or dryness, but of good government."

The Maryland senator said he was convinced Smith "is a strict believer in temperance."

"I told the governor Maryland can't do anything else than go Democratic," Tydings said. "The state's voters like Smith's frankness. He has the same sort of appeal to them as has Governor Ritchie."

"Gov. Smith is certain to carry Missouri," said Sen. Hawes. "I pointed out to him that Sen. Reed carried the state even though he had opposition in his own party. I told him Hoover will not get the votes of the Missouri farmers, because he has been in the Cabinet eight years and has never tried to help them."

Milbank to Take Charge of G. O. P. Finances in East

Washington, July 20—Drafting of another "big business" man into the Presidential campaign is revealed with the announcement that Jeremiah Milbank, merchant and banker, will have full charge of raising Republican campaign funds in the entire east.

Milbank conducts a private banking business on Wall st. He is also a director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Chase National Bank, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, Southern Railway Company, Corn Products Refining Company, trustee of Provident Loan Association and chairman of the board of directors of Case, Peabody & Co., investment bankers.

Democrats Plan Great Drive to Win Congress

New York, July 20—After gaining the full approval of Governor Alfred E. Smith, Democratic managers have made control of the next Congress a campaign objective of equal rank and importance with the election of the Governor to the presidency.

The Democratic high command is preparing to launch the greatest drive in history to overturn the Republican majorities in the Senate and House so that Smith will have Congress in harmony with his policies if he is elected.

Twenty of the 32 Senators to be elected in the fall are Democrats. Going over a partial list of Democratic Senators up for re-election, or the Democratic nominees of the primaries, Senator Tydings put down as sure winners the following:

Ashurst of Arizona, Ransdell of Delaware, Bruce of Maryland, Copeland of New York, Edwards of New Jersey, Gerry of Rhode Island, McKellar of Tennessee, Mayfield of Texas, Pittman of Nevada, Reed of Missouri, Stephens of Mississippi, Swanson of Virginia, Trammell of Florida, Walsh of Massachusetts and Wheeler of Montana.

Where There's a Will

Atlantic City, July 20—Miss Monta Rae Tunstall, 21, of Owensboro, Ky., and Miss Gwynn McLendon, 20, of Louisville are long distance hikers. They have walked 1000 miles or so to see a girl who goes to Bethel Woman's College with them. They left Louisville July 10 with $13, a pound of frankfurters and two loaves of bread.

1 WOMAN, 35 MEN HOP OFF IN 1000-MILE AIR RACE

Hendon Airdrome, Eng., July 20 (INS)—Thirty-six airplanes, including one piloted by a woman, hopped off here today on the first stage of the annual 1000-mile race round Britain for the King's cup. Today's leg of the journey was to Glasgow, Scotland, via Norwich, Birmingham, Leeds and Newcastle.

The return journey will be by way of Blackpool, Manchester, Bristol, Southampton and Lympne to Brooklands race track.

The entries included 14 De Havilland "moths," of the type purchased by Miss Amelia Earhart when she was in England after her transatlantic flight. For the first time in the history of the race a helicopter type of machine is participating.

WOMAN KILLED, 3 NUNS HURT

Ayer, July 20—One woman was killed and four others, three of whom are nuns, were injured when an automobile side-swiped a telegraph pole and overturned on the State road between this town and Fitchburg.

Miss Mary Ward, 62, of Gardner was killed. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Grace Ward, who was the driver of the car, is in serious condition at Community Memorial Hospital. The nuns were treated at the hospital for cuts and bruises and taken home.

CAPE GLIDERS BALKED BY WIND

Truro, July 20—An unfavorable east wind, which gave every indication of continuing until nightfall, today held up the plans of the German gliders here to get into the air.

The gliders want a west wind, but Capt. Roshre declared they would make a flight some time during the day.

In that connection they visited Highland Light, about three miles from here, to study conditions with the possibility that the flight may be started from that point instead of from Corn Hill here.

Advertise Your Wants in the Boston Evening American

If You Want It First, Read the American

READERS of the Boston Evening American yesterday were again given dramatic examples of the service of news to which they are entitled and to which end this newspaper consistently strives.

Readers of this newspaper were first to obtain the knowledge that the body of Loewenstein, third richest man in the world, had been cast up by the waters of the English Channel. The Boston Evening American, takes greater gratification, however, in its presentation to its readers of the story of the ousting of "Big Bill" Tilden from the United States Davis Cup team.

Boston Evening American readers were instantly apprised of the importance of the story by the manner in which it was displayed. They were given every one of its interesting details. They were told of the reaction of leaders of the tennis world—both at home and abroad. They were served with illustrations that graphically portrayed the career of the remarkable "Big Bill."

It was a "cleanup" and typical of the service of news which only readers of this newspaper can appreciate.

Filene's Automatic Bargain BASEMENT

First Price? second price? or third price?

—Why is it that so large a percentage of the merchandise in Filene's basement is sold at the first price?

—Why is it that more people don't wait for the second price, knowing that after 12 selling days anything unsold is automatically reduced 25%?

—Well, answer the question yourself: If when you saw, recently, house dresses at 80c, with hundreds of women swarming around them, it was apparent that with such an extraordinary bargain at 80c there would be none left to be reduced to 60c later on!

—In other words, our Automatic Plan is not only corrective medicine when goods don't sell, but it is preventive medicine as well.

—For, knowing that we will take severe losses if the first price is not right, we watch our step very carefully in buying only the right kind of bargains, and we make doubly sure we price things low enough.

—Here once more is the plan that has made Filene's basement famous—that makes hundreds of bargains every day—and that makes the first price an extraordinary price:

Anything unsold after 12 selling days is automatically reduced 25%

Anything unsold after 18 selling days is automatically reduced 50%

Anything unsold after 24 selling days is automatically reduced 75%

Anything unsold after 30 selling days is given to charitable institutions.

HUB BOUND SHIP SINKS PATROL BOAT; 2 DIE

Cape May, N. J., July 20 (AP)—Two coast guardsmen were drowned and five rescued today when the steamship Culberson sank coast guard patrol boat No. 113 in a thick fog off the Delaware capes.

The dead are: H. F. Haines motor machinist's mate, first class, Pleasantville, N. J.; D. T. Hale, motor machinist's mate, second class, Atlanta, Ga.

The rescued: E. P. Becker, chief boatswain's mate, in command; Cecil Boggs, chief machinist's mate; W. B. Wright, boatswain's mate; J. Dabbler, surgeon; T. Riddick, Cook.

The Culberson, bound from Buenos Aires and Santos, Brazil, for Boston by way of Philadelphia, cut the patrol boat in half. Haines and Hale were in the engine room when the collision occurred and had no chance for escape.

The culberson stood by and searched for members of the patrol boat's crew. The steam pilot boat Philadelphia rescued five men and transferred them to patrol boat No. 116, which brought them to the coast guard base here.

Patrol boat 113 had been assigned to watch for rum runners, and the collision occurred when it approached the Culberson to identify her. Officers of the Culberson said they did not see the patrol boat until the steamship was upon her.

The Culberson, commanded by Capt. Wood, was not damaged and proceeded to Philadelphia.

TURTLE STUMPS N. E. EXPERTS

for a year, they probably can for a longer period.

"The bare possibility of the life in the wood as a means of food might be regarded as a help, but I can't understand how it got in there in the first place."

Thornton W. Burgess, author, editor and natural history expert of Springfield, considered the long-lived imprisonment "plausible."

"The turtle is a cold-blooded reptile and requires but little breathing anyway," he said.

"Considering the comatose state, with its system practically at a standstill, it seems plausible that the turtle has actually lived there during all those years.

"Where energy is expended, the requirements of heat are negligible.

"The only question that may arise is the possibility of food or some sort of sustenance. This may lead to an interesting discovery as regards food—or the absence of food—in the life of creatures of this nature.

"I should like very much to view the circumstances under which the turtle was found. I am convinced it is not the stunt of a nature faker because I believe the statement of Lieut. John Lord, U. S. N., would not come hastily."

Arthur Loveridge, assistant curator in charge of reptiles at the Museum of Comparative Zoology—part of the Agassiz Museum at Harvard—was skeptical however.

"It is a good story, but to my mind it is impossible," he said. "No reptile could live that long under the condition described."

The turtle, which probably will become mascot of the Constitution, spent part of the night in Lieut. Lord's office, having climbed out of the pan of water that is its temporary home.

For lack of any better food, Lt. Lord is feeding the reptile on leaves of water vegetation growing in the seams of the water-soaked logs, 1400 tons of which were shipped to Boston some months ago.

HUB WOOL MEN PROTEST TEXAS FREIGHT RATES

Washington, July 20 (AP)—A petition for modification of the Inter-State Commerce Commission's recent decision on Southwestern railroad rates in so far as they affect wool and mohair traffic out of Texas has been filed by the Boston Wool Association with the support of the Texas producers at San Angelo and other points in that state.

The petition asked the commission to restore all of the former rates on wool and mohair on the ground that their reasonableness was being considered in a general proceeding now pending

Love Triangle Ended by Bomb; 2 Arrested

Rockford, Ill., July 20 (AP)—A bomb, an electrical current and an auto combined to dissolve a domestic triangle through the death of the husband and put the wife and her alleged suitor in jail today.

Vernon Plager, 32, Rockford radio expert, was the victim of the bomb wired in his auto so as to explode when he stepped on the starter.

"Paul Reed did it," he whispered on his death bed.

Reed, 30, a draftsman, surrendered at Oregon, Ill., protesting his innocence and giving an alibi.

Mrs. Plager, 27, mother of a five-year-old daughter, also held by police, supported her husband's accusation against Reed.

Last year, police said, Mrs. Plager and Reed ran away, but were arrested and returned. They were fined and a reconciliation followed between husband and wife for the sake of their child.

Last Wednesday, the widow said, Reed again asked her to elope with him. "I can't live without you," she quoted him as saying. "Every time I see you with your husband it makes me furious."

The widow said she ordered Reed to leave her and never return.

OHIO MAN DROWNS AT HIS CAPE SUMMER HOME

West Dennis, July 20 (AP)—Ira Ellsworth Stevens, Columbus, O., was seized with an attack of heart disease while swimming in Bass river, within sight of his Cape Cod summer home, and died before rescuers recovered his body, which floated to mid-stream. His son is expected here today, from New York City to make funeral arrangements. Stevens was in apparent good health, working in his flower garden just prior to going in swimming.

"DRYS" SCATTER TO HOMES TO WAR AGAINST SMITH

Asheville, N. C., July 20 (AP)—Having pledged themselves to defeat Governor Smith, delegates to the conference of dry southern Democrats separated today to carry to their home states the campaign against the nominee.

The conference statement declared "unswerving allegiance to the principles of true democracy," but asserted that "we cannot support Governor Smith, nominee of the Houston Convention for the Presidency of the United States, and we hereby pledge ourselves as anti-Smith Democrats to use all proper and honorable means to secure his defeat."

Hop for Rio Sunday

Natal, Brazil, July 20 (INS)—Maj. Arturo Ferrarin and Carlo Del Prete, Italian transatlantic fliers, hope to complete the repairs to their plane tomorrow and hop off for Rio De Janeiro on Sunday.

Scott Sydney Dies Suddenly

Bartlett, Hertfordshire, England, July 20 (AP)—Scott Sydney, American film producer, died suddenly in his hotel here while discussing the production of a film comedy.

REVERE WOMAN FIRST ON CITY HEALTH BOARD

Mayor John E. Walsh of Revere today announced he will appoint Mrs. Catherine B. Collins, wife of Dennis F. Collins of 808 Revere st., Revere, to the local Board of Health, making the first time in the history of the city that a woman has held such an office.

Mayor Walsh said he would submit the name of Mrs. Collins to the City Council on August 1, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hugh McKay, who moved to Connecticut. The position pays $300 a year.

The Mayor also announced he will not be a candidate for re-election.

BURSTING MAIN FLOODS NEW NORTH STATION SITE

Water spurted 15 feet in the air and flooded an area 100 yards square today on Boston & Maine property at the new North Station, when a faulty elbow in a newly laid water main split. Delay in finding the right shutoff was responsible for much of the flood.

WHOOPING COUGH COLONY PLAN IS BANNED BY MAYOR

Long Branch, N. J., July 20 (AP)—Plans of Henry Katzman, local hotel proprietor, for the establishment of whooping cough colony gave little hope to him of realization.

Katzman recently expressed an opinion it would pay him to set aside his hotel exclusively for patients having the malady. Today Mayor William Jones announced entry to the city of whooping cough patients would be denied.

TRY TO RECOVER DROWNED MAN WITH DYNAMITE

White Plains, July 20 (AP)—State police today were attempting to recover by dynamite the body of Chester Johnson, 51, who drowned in an abandoned quarry pool while bathing with other youths. Johnson was an attendant at the Orthopedic Hospital, where it was said his nearest relative was Clifford Johnson of Summit ave., North Dartmouth, Mass. The cold waters of the spring-fed pool were believed to have caused cramps.

DORCHESTER WOMAN DIES AFTER LONG SICKNESS

Mrs. Catherine Hapgnie died today at her home, 5 Dever st., Dorchester, following an illness of four years. She is survived by her husband, James, five sons Harry, Matthew, Joseph, John and Arthur, and a daughter Bertha. The funeral will be Monday with solemn high mass in St. Peter's Church, Dorchester.

CANCER DEATHS HIGHEST AMONG TALLER PERSONS

London, July 20 (AP)—The highest mortality from cancer is to be found among the tallest human groups, said Professor A. Pittard of Geneva in a paper read before the British Empire Cancer Conference here today. The higher cancer rate in London, as compared with New York, must be due, said Professor Pittard, to the greater proportion of the Nordic type in London.

USE HORN LESS, BRAKES MORE, SAFETY RULE

By FRANK A. GOODWIN

Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Careless parking of automobiles results in hundreds of accidents every year. Many of them are fatal accidents.

A law that is violated daily is that which prohibits operators from leaving their cars on the highway without locking or making them fast, particularly on a hill.

Frank A. Goodwin

We often read of a child getting into a car and getting it properly locked, and starting it downhill, with disastrous results.

Another law requires the operator to stop the engine if he stops the car and leaves it unattended. It is dangerous to leave a car with engine running, especially in a district where there are children.

Another fool thing is to stop a car on a curve, because a motorist regarding the curve may be operating at such a high rate of speed that he cannot make the sudden stop necessary.

FOOLS THERE BE

It is no excuse to say the moving operator should not be going fast around a curve.

Almost every day you will see the tire-changing fool and wonder how he has lived so long. No operator should attempt to fix a tire unless he pulls off the road. As a rule, careless operators are careless only so far as it effects the other fellow, but here is the type that puts his own life in jeopardy.

Another menace is the operator, and especially the truck driver, who travels with no tail light. He is particularly bad if he stops his car on a curve or just over the brow of a hill.

The "one-eyed Mike" is another nuisance, especially if the light that is out is the one farther from the middle of the road.

LAW FORBIDS

There are some offenses committed by motorists that are offensive to others and yet may not be dangerous.

One of our laws prevents the operator of an automobile or motorcycle with muffler cut-out open.

There is absolutely no excuse for this type of violation except to make unnecessary noise, and if there is one thing above all others that makes motorcycles unpopular it is the sudden roar of unmuffled exhaust.

Unnecessary sounding of horns is another offense committed by thoughtless motorists and it is likewise prohibited by law.

One of the evils of city life is the necessary din and roar in our streets. Every motorist should do his part to stop it.

It would be a wonderful thing if the automobile horn was never used except to warn the car that you are about to pass. Use your brakes more and your horn less is a splendid motto.

DISTINGUISHED PASSENGERS SAIL ON ILE DE FRANCE, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Edgar Rust and J. W. Wheeler to Tour Holland After Latter Joins His Family

SOCIETY BIRDS OF PASSAGE FLIT OVER THE OCEAN, NOT ON WINGS, BUT via the luxurious liners that each season attain more and more to supreme heights. Aboard the Ile de France, steaming out of New York at midnight tonight with an interesting complement of late season travelers, goes Edgar C. Rust. Mr. Rust is accompanied by J. W. Wheeler and goes to join his family, who preceded him by some weeks across the ocean. They sailed on the Scythia early in June, and after the reunion all will tour Holland and thereabouts, and come back home some time in September.

MRS. CHARLES L. HARDING, OF DEDHAM, Newport and Palm Beach, goes to France on the palatial Ile de France, via its present crossing. This mistress of several establishments and a yacht or so is not to be in Newport this summer. The diversions of foreign travel and existance abroad that give variety to high life are Mrs. Harding's preference at the moment. Mrs. Harding is a sister of Mrs. Arthur Blake, and one of the Blake children, Miss Harrietta, is her namesake and godchild.

LEAVING THE LITTLE DAUGHTER, IRENA, IN the care of her maternal grandparent, Mrs. Thomas P. Curtis, the Princess Michael Cantacuzene deserts Nahant temporarily. She is now in Chicago with her spouse, whose business interests in the Windy City preclude a summertime sojourn of any length on the Massachusetts coast. The tall and vividly blonde Princess makes a long season in pretty little Nahant, where she is perfectly at home, and knows every rugged foot of the shore where she and her brothers romped through childhood days.

MRS. CURTIS GUILD ALSO DESERTS HER beloved Nahant, but very temporarily. And her journeyings take her not to the West but only so far as in town to the Ritz and its tinted-pastel dining room overlooking the Gardens. Luncheon was her objective, taken with friends at the smart hostelry. Mrs. Guild is a Bostonian, always meeting the eye gratifyingly, with her grande dame manner, her pearls, her ivory-topped heirloom cane and her wide hats. For luncheon she was looking as radiantly effective as though that day and the town were not bathed in a golden haze of heat.

MISS PEGGY WARNER

Society girl steps off smartly on a summer day errand, probably having to do with refreshment of her hot weather wardrobe. Miss Warner belongs to Vincent Club and Junior League. -Evening American Photo.

NEXT SATURDAY Mrs. Guild is giving a soldiers' party. Frequently Mrs. Guild entertains for the disabled ones; however, tomorrow's jollification is not for World War veterans but for the men who fought way back in 1861. But, young or old, they all have the pleasantest of afternoons when Mrs. Guild is hostess. Her villa at Nahant is the unpretentious and hospitable sort, rather than overpoweringly imposing. There are gardens, fine old trees and a seascape unbeatable, and typically New Englandish.

NAHANT SOON HAS A BIG town celebration. And no dyed-in-the-wool Nahanter, of the winter or summer colonies, will miss it. The Princess Cantacuzene plans to come back East for this old home week sort of merrimaking, to be an ornamental adjunct when "open house" is kept at all the villas, and probably to dance with "The Admiral" when that gold-laced and beribboned personage is entertained ashore. The celebration comes off in a week or so, and in a way everything social in the attractive colony is marking time in anticipation.

THE ESSEX COUNTY CLUB that lies amid its rolling hillocks down in the heart of the smart North Shore will be the mecca next week, socially and athletically. Invitation Tennis Week interests all the fashionables, whether they themselves swing a clever racket or merely sit in the stands and help to make the gallery a super-brilliant one. The tennis stars that cavort about next week are as brilliant as is the sunlight that pours down on the courts.

EVERYONE OF ANY SOCIAL consequence whatsoever will flock to Essex County Club. And the card is most absorbing—it offers international tennis champions of the Wills variety as well as some of the home-grown product, represented by the Palfrey net marvels. Sports by day and frivolities by night interest the visitors and the resident colony alike, and altogether afford as gay and important a week as the entire summer contains.

SHIP SPEEDING WORLD RACERS TO PORT

By JOHN HENRY MEARS
Written exclusively for The Boston Evening American

Copyright, 1928, in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, South America and Cuba by the New York American, Inc. Reproduction in whole or in part absolutely prohibited. Violation of this copyright will be vigorously prosecuted.

Distributed by Universal Service

Aboard the S.S. Empress of Russia, July 20—They're burning a lot of extra coal on this good ship. And its propellers are making more revolutions per second probably than they ever have before.

That's because the crew—from its captain down to its lowliest kitchen mechanic—and all its passengers, as well, are in fever of excitement to speed us along in our race to beat the moon around the world. In addition to helping us make a world's record, in all probability, the Empress of Russia will hang up a record for itself in its trip from Yokohama across the Pacific.

There seems not the slightest doubt now that we will establish a new record for the fastest time around the world. We made 454 knots today—fast time for a Pacific ocean liner—and we're due in Vancouver at 5 o'clock tonight.

Our swift little plane—City of New York—is aboard with us and will be in readiness on deck as soon as the ship is warped into her pier. She will be swung ashore by a derrick and it won't be long before Charles B. D. Collyer, my pilot, and I are in her cockpit again, winging our way to Seattle. I almost forgot to mention the third member of our party. He is Tailwind. The little Seelingham terrier which we have carried along with us on our whirlwind trip and who soon is destined to hold the honor of being the first dog to fly around the world. That ought to win Tailwind the blue ribbon in most any dog show.

Arriving in Seattle, we expect to take off as soon as we can refuel and get a little rest for the last jump of our trip. With favorable weather and good mechanics, we hope to make a non-stop flight from there direct into New York and our starting point.

(John Henry Mears and Charles B. D. Collyer are now steaming eastward across the Pacific on their attempt to establish a new world record by girdling the globe in less than 25 days. They will continue to send the story of their attempt exclusively to this newspaper.)

Boy Injured

Robert Martin, 11, of Belmont st., Everett, while attending a municipal band concert at the Swan st. playgrounds, fell on a broken milk bottle, sustaining a gash on his arm which required 18 stitches at Malden Hospital.

POWER'S SANTA CLAUS

Mr. Hubert P. Wolfe,
Extension Division,
University of Colorado,
Boulder, Colorado.

My dear Hub:

You will recall that a short time ago I assured you that Santa Claus might be prevailed upon to visit your squalid hut. That I succeeded in convincing the old boy is evidenced by the check herewith.

This check is in accordance with the arrangement mentioned some time ago for stepping up your income a bit.

Don't spend it all for liquor or ham and eggs.

By the way, tell me, again, what your salary is at the University, so I can make proper arrangements for the future.

Very truly yours,

POWER TRUST PROBERS IN BOSTON

Washington, July 20—Twenty-six Federal trade commission experts are investigating electric power companies in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, gathering material for resumption of the commission's hearings in September.

The commission said that the propaganda phase of the investigation was complete except for Pacific coast and some Southern States. The big feature of the inquiry to be resumed in September will deal with financing of utilities and holding company set-ups, by which it is charged consumers of electricity have been obliged to pay rates based on watered capital.

PLOTS TO GET $80,000 AND PAYS WITH HIS LIFE

Ossining, N. Y., July 20 (AP)—Joseph Lefkowitz, accused as the instigator of the drowning of a boy whose life he had insured for $50,000, died in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison.

Lefkowitz protested his innocence to the last. "I didn't know there was going to be anybody killed," he said just before he was led to the death chair. "All I knew was that there was to be a fake drowning and that nobody was to get hurt even."

SLATER DEATH VERDICT SET ASIDE IN SCOTLAND

Edinburgh, Scotland, July 20 (AP)—Conviction of Oscar Slater for the murder of Miss Mary Gilchrist, an aged woman, in 1908, has been unanimously set aside. The judge in the proceedings of Slater to establish his innocence set the conviction aside on the ground that it was a miscarriage of justice. Slater had been released last November. He was arrested in New York in 1909 as he stepped off a liner and returned to Glasgow for trial. His case came into prominence last August during the Sacco-Vanzetti proceedings, several British newspapers citing it as a case in British history which might be compared with the Massachusetts case.

NAB WILD AUTOIST WHO HITS 15 TIMES IN CHASE

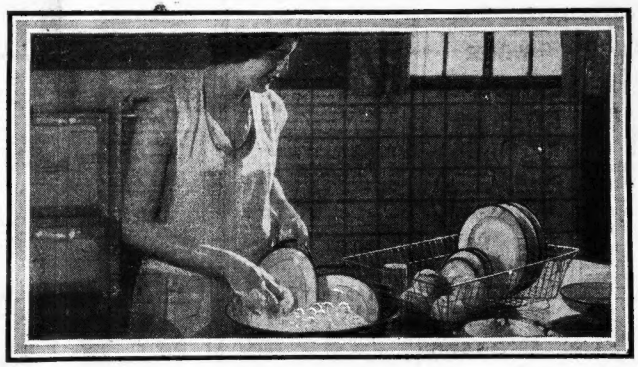
Springfield, July 20—A wild ride at 70 miles an hour through the center of the city, with a man clinging desperately on the running board and 12 policemen giving chase in commandeered cars, ended in arrest today for Evdokin Kolyako of Day st., West Springfield. More than 500 persons turned, watched and then followed the automobile to see where the mad dash would end. It hit 13 other autos, two trolley cars and a hydrant before Kolyako slowed down and was overtaken.

Abraham Margolis of Perry st. leaped aboard to try to stop it and had to hang on for his life. Kolyako is charged with driving under the influence of liquor.

Yes—a better way to wash dishes

Science brings forward Super Suds—beads of soap

New! Different! Quick!



WASH dishes the new scientific way—with Super Suds, the new bead soap which has swept from coast to coast in a few months' time!

Put your dishpan in the sink. Pour generously from the convenient, free-flowing Super Suds package. Turn on the hot water. Soap dissolves instantly—completely.

Why Super Suds replaces chips

Every woman knows that a soap which dissolves quickly and completely makes the tedious task of dishwashing easier.

Once women had only bar soap. Next came chips. Better—but chips were slow-dissolving, and oh, how much soap was wasted!

And now—through the discovery of these amazing new soap beads—you can get a perfect soap solution in ten seconds. Not one of the older forms of soap can dissolve so fast as Super Suds, the bead soap.*

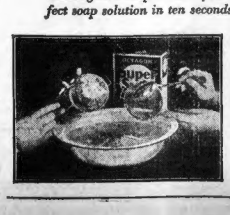
Super Suds is not at all like chips, flakes, powders. It is soap in a new form—tiny hollow beads, tissue-thin. Four times as thin as chips—the thinnest soap ever made.

Super Suds makes glassware sparkle. Not a trace of soapy film on china. No need to wipe—just hot rinse and drain.

Use Super Suds for clothes too. Splendid in tub or washing machine. Use it all over the house—for windows, for painted woodwork, and for making the bathroom spick and span.

Full directions on every package, and a valuable Octagon coupon, too. Save the coupons and get lovely premiums.

Just ask your grocer for Super Suds—the biggest box of soap you ever saw for 10 cents.



*COMPARE! Make this test right in your own kitchen

A pan of warm water. Two strainers. In one a tablespoon of any chip. In the other the same amount of Super Suds. Plunge both strainers into water. Stir briskly while you count ten. Then—lift both strainers! In one strainer, half of the chips still there. In the other, Super Suds all gone! Quick-dissolving Super Suds saves dishwashing time, makes clothes whiter

BIGGEST box of soap for 10¢

Clothes whiter! . . . Quick, strong suds . . . No more soap stains . . . Gentle on clothes . . . Saves one rinsing . . . Saves hands . . . A sweeter, softer wash

Life is easier in an All-Gas Home...

Imagine, for example, the conveniences of a cellar like the one illustrated. It's from an actual photograph taken in this vicinity.

No space-consuming coal bins . . . no dust seeping through the home . . . no ash barrels to juggle . . . no odor or noise.

Now for the positive features—what gas does:

Supplies you with plenty of hot water for all purposes. Cooks your food. Cools your refrigerator. Heats your home automatically—keeps the temperature even and uniform, regardless of the weather outside. Burns rubbish and trash.

Gas is the better fuel because it helps us all to live easier, happier, more useful lives. Find out now what gas is ready, willing and waiting to do for you.

Call on your gas company for demonstrations of house heating, cooking, water heating, refrigeration, incineration and other uses for GAS—THE BETTER FUEL.

For the information of the people of New England a series of messages, of which this is one, is being published by this and 1 dozen of New England's gas companies. They contain interesting facts about GAS—THE BETTER FUEL—and its importance to your home and business.

NOBILE PARTY SURVIVORS TO SPEED HOME

London, July 20—The Citta de Milano, base ship of the dirigible Italia which crashed in the far north, was expected to leave Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, today for Narvik, norway, with the rescued members of the Italia's crew.

The Italian members of the crew have been ordered home by Premier Mussolini. They were taken to King's Bay by the ice breaker Krassin and transferred to the Citta de Milano.

Reports from Kings Bay say all the rescued men are well with the exception of Capt. Marino, one of the Maingreye group, whose leg was amputated Wednesday.

In addition to ordering the members of the ill fated dirigible's crew home, it was reported here that Premier Mussolini had ordered them not to discuss further the voyage and its tragic end.

The Citta de Milano, it was believed, would return to Kings Bay after letting the rescued members of the crew off at Narvik, to continue the searhc for the remaining members of the crew who have not been found.

NONE SAVED HER

"It was the heat, not the humidity," that overcame 14-year-old Mary Tirone of East Boston, she asserted today in denying being saved from drowning yesterday. She said she became faint while seated on the raft at World War Memorial Park.

ROBBERS VISIT G. O. P. OFFICE

A possible attempt to steal the political secrets of the Republican State committee was seen today when it was discovered that their headquarters at 11 Beacon st., had been broken into.

The lock on the main office door, Room 706, had been broken and glass in tile door of Room 712 on the same corridor, a part of the committee's suite, was crack-d.

Secretary Charles Nichols said that as far as he could see nothing had been taken, adding that the letter files were kept under lock and key.

Superintendent of the building Warren P. Weeks is making an investigation, and it was stated that a watchman will be on duty nights hereafter.

WILLIAM A. GROZIER FUNERAL TOMORROW

Funeral services will be held for William A. Grozier, business manager of the Boston Post, at the Grozier home, 71 Bellevue ave., Melrose tomorrow morning, at 10:30 o'clock.

In the absence of the Rev. Hoyard ell. Bennett, pastor of the Melrose Congregational Church, where Mr. Grozier worshipped, the Rev. Ralph el. Rowse, superintendent of the Boston City Missionary Society will officiate. Burial will be in Forestdale Cemetery, Malden.

The pallbearers will be associates of Mr. Grozier on the Post. The honorary pallbearers, who have been selected from his most intimate friends include H. Merrion Joyce, J. E. A. Hussey, H. C. Brine, W. H. Emart, S. J. Hallahan, Fergus Brown, W. B. Kendall and H. A. P. Peckham.

FILIPINOS FLEE HOMES AS VOLCANO BELCHES

Manila, July 20 (AP)—A violent eruption of Mayon, the volcano in Albay Province which recently became unusually active, today terrified the populace for miles in all directions. Business in Legaspi and smaller towns near the base of the mountain was paralyzed. Lava shot from the crater in a dense column of smoke, which cast a pall over much of the province. The activity was accompanied by a deep rumbling. Governor-General Stimson announced he would leave Manila tomorrow aboard the cruiser Trenton for Legaspi to investigate the situation.

BRITISH LINER DISABLED IN FAR EAST; CALLS HELP

Colombo, Ceylon, July 20 (AP)—The British liner City of Yokohama, homeward bound from Australia, has sent a wireless message that she is disabled and wants assistance. Her position was about 1100 miles south of Colombo. The local agents of the line are expected to send a tug from here.

The City of Yokohama is owned by the Ellerman Lines, Ltd., and has a registered tonnage of 7,341. Her home port is Liverpool.

DEDHAM SCHOOL HEAD SEEKS REINSTATEMENT

A petition for a writ of mandamus to force his reinstatement by the Dedham school committee, was filed today in the supreme court by Thomas S. Foley who, prior to his dismissal this year, he dbeen principal of the Quincy and Avery schools at Dedham for nine years. The petition is returnable August 1. Foley alleges his dismissal was due to ill-feeling originating at the town election last spring when he supported candidates who were defeated by present members of the board.

WINS POINT OF LAW, BUT HE'LL PAY FOR IT

With the "satisfaction" of knowing he corrected a judge on a point of law, but the sad knowledge that it cost him a few years in jail to do so, Richard Dodge of North Wilmington went back to Concord reformatory today.

He was arraigned before Judge Halloran in Dedham court on a charge of escaping from Norfolk County jail ten days ago. The escape took place just after he had been transferred from Concord where he was serving the usual indefinite term.

Found guilty, Dodge was sentenced to six months and the court explained the law required that he be sent back to Concord.

"You can't give me six months at Concord," spoke up Dodge.

"That's right," replied Judge Halloran, "I'll have to make it indefinite."

After thinking it over, while other matters were being disposed of, Dodge again took the floor, saying: "Your Honor, they can keep me there five years on that indefinite sentence. I'm sorry I spoke."

The sentence stood. Frank Bioni, of Franklin, and William Aldridge, of Roxbury, charged with escaping with Dodge, were given six months to serve at Deer Island.

WIDOW CLAIMS BODY OF BANKER LOEWENSTEIN

Calais, France, July 20 (AP)—Finding of the body of Capt. Alfred Lowenstein, Belgian financier, in the English Channel today revived the mystery which surrounds his death.

It was believed that the French government would begin an official inquiry to establish whether death was accidental or suicide and whether any of his fellow passengers on the fatal plane trip share responsibility for his death. Discovery of the body definitely set at rest rumors that the mystery man of European finance had perpetrated a gigantic hoax by disappearing alive.

The authorities still have to determine whether he fell accidently from his plane in crossing the channel or deliberately wrenched open the exit door and plunged to his death.

Capt. Lowenstein's body today was placed in a casket which had been sent overnight from Brussels and a funeral car will take the body home as soon as the authorities here complete the necessary formalities.

Madame Lowenstein was persuaded not to come to Calais but sent her brother and brother-in-law to take charge of the body.

Dr. Boufroy, who examined the body, found nothing to show the exact cause of death, whether he was drowned or killed by the shock of the fall from a height of 4000 feet. All he could do was to make absolutely certain of the identity by comparison of the dental work with work that it was known that Capt. Lowenstein had done. It was considered probable that the case would be turned over to an examining magistrate shortly.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1928

Can a Girl Have Too Much Feminine Appeal?

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Nancy Deane, golden haired, dark eyed, has been brought up by the O'Days in Worcester. She is really the daughter of Montague Deane and Julia Abbott, the former the disinherited son of one of a rich Boston family, but she is unaware of this relationship. She loves the O'Days and works in a lunchroom to help them. There she meets John Blair, who helps her out of a difficulty and invites her to go to the circus. Although she is wary of men generally she recognizes that Blair is a gentleman and accepts.

Nancy loses her job. Mrs. O'Day tells her she's heard from her mother who's in town with the circus and wants to see the baby she deserted 18 years before. Nancy hears the true story of her parentage. She goes to the circus realizing her mother is a performer in the big show.

Julie falls from a trapeze and Nancy fights her way to her side calling wildly that she's her mother. She faints and later runs madly to the hospital. Julie is dying, but Nancy vows eternal love for Muddy O'Day and realizes, too, where she has inherited her admiration for dancing and glittering things.

Nancy suddenly decides to go to Boston and Blair, whom she has grown to admire, gives her a letter to a college friend who runs a mill in the New England capital.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 5

NANCY climbed into the coach for Boston, her heart pounding. She slipped in the aisle, half throwing her into a seat. Her patent leather purse with the red trimmings, flew from her hand straight into the lap of the girl occupying the seat.

"Sorry," Nancy apologized.

"That's alright, dearie," the girl said. "Come right in an' make yourself comfy. Goin' to Boston, I suppose. Well, that's where I'm goin' too. Live there. Jes' been up to Quinsigamond on a vacation. But say, this back to nature stuff don't appeal to me none. Not one little bit."

"Say, I'm just a sight with mose quito bites. An' I'm burned raw My complexion's a sight. Lookit!"

The girl held out her hands for Nancy to "lookit." Nancy wondered if she regarded her hands as her complexion. They did bear the traces of a little sunburn, just slightly pink on the backs of her hands and over arms, but the fingers were white as milk. Her nails were extremely long and manicured to elaborate points. They were stained a deep pink, too, and shone like rubies.

"Say, let the preachers preach that back to nature stuff till they's blue in the face. Ginger's never going to get tempted into this stuff again

"Say, there wasn't one bimbo with any snap come into my life in all the two weeks I was stagnatin' at the lake. So that's why I'm hearing it out of there, even though I ain't due back to the store 'till Saturday.

"It'll be three days' fling for Ginger, and then for the work good and plenty. Fall styles show's opening at the Elks' hotel next week. Us girls will be rossting in those winter coats.

"But that, dearie, is the life of Nelle the beautiful cloak model. But say, it's fun modelin'. An' I'm sure glad the summer's nearly over. Me for winter when the lights come on earlier. There's always more doin' in winter anyways. An' I'd just rather be dead than not goin' all the time. That's how I am. rather be dead than not on the go every minute

"That's how I am, down at the house they call me Jazzmania because I'm so restless. My name's Virginia—Ginger for snap. Virginia Varden. Her Harden once, but Varden went better with Virginia What you think?"

Nancy's head was whirling. The continuous chatter of the girl who called herself Ginger for snap, was so amazing that Nancy did not know what she did think. She opened her mouth to say something but Ginger spoke first.

Just then her eyes lighted on someone she knew.

"Well, for eyein' out loud, if there isn't Jerry Durant."

Hardly had she spoken when Mr. Durant caught her eye, and started toward the two girls.

"Whatever is he doing on this train in the neck of the woods", Ginger was saying, "this car must have busted, or something", can't imagine Jerry traveling on a train 'cept he's got the car by him."

Ginger had guessed it. Jerry's car had a broken wheel. Some "fool" had run into him just outside of Worcester, he said, and he had to leave the car there.

"Couldn't wait," he told the girls. After Nancy had been introduced.

"Had to get back to Federal court today tonight. You're going aren't you? Another one of those studio parties.

"Bowie can that woman ever give them a party? Nice girl, Gladys."

No, Ginger said she hadn't known of the party, but would go anyway From their conversation Nancy learned that Colette was a very "broad minded" person who did freelance illustrating and occasional modeling, and that she had a studio in the West End of Boston

"Bring your girl friend here with you" Jerry said, looking down at Nancy. "Sure, come on alone, girlie. It's free for all. The more the merrier."

"Sure thing," said Ginger. "Like to go, kiddo?"

Half frightened, half thrilled Nancy looked at Ginger, then back to the smiling, flushed face of Jerry Durant.

"I'd love to go, but you see I don't even know where I am going to and A friend of mine, a Mr. Blair, said he thought I ought to go over to the Franklin Sq House Just to get my bearings, you know Then he said I could hunt up some other place to live if I didn't care to stay.

"This Mr Blair is getting me a job in a knitting factory, and I'm going to night school so I can work in an office. Maybe, I'd better go right to the Franklin Sq. before I

HUB ATTORNEY ACQUITTED IN ATTACK CASE

Frances W. Adams, Boston attorney, was before Chief Justice Winfred Bolster in municipal court today charged with assault and battery on Alfred W. Foster, a carpenter of Tremont st., South End. He was found not guilty

Foster said he was engaged to do some work at 745 Tremont st., and that on July 17 Adams, who had hired him, went to the place to inspect the work. The carpenter and he demanded his money, and that Atty Adams struck him, knocking him through the glass in a door

Atty. Adams, in his version of the affair, said he inspected the work and informed Foster he would send him a check. He said Foster demanded cash, and becoming angered, thrust his fist through the glass. He then followed the lawyer to the latter's automobile, the witness said, using vile language

"I ought to get out and slap you real hard," Atty. Adams quoted himself as saying to the carpenter

"The man knew I was a member of the bar, Your Honor," he continued, "but instead of serving a summons on me, had me arrested

Officer John H. Malloy of the East Dedham St. station then arose to explain why the warrant was obtained

"I didn't know he was a member of the bar, Your Honor," said Malloy. "I thought he was an ex-motorman."

"Would that make any difference?" Chief Justice Bolster asked.

Malloy said it would not, but that he was only trying to get the record straight.

The court found no evidence of an assault.

CAMBRIDGE BOY FINED FOR SELLING LIQUOR

Found guilty for the keeping and exposing liquor for sale and for making an illegal sale, seventeen-year-old Ralph J. McElwain of Broadways, Cambridge, was arraigned in the East Cambridge court today.

He was fined $10 on the first count and sentenced to the Industrial school for boys on the sale charges with a suspension till June 24, 1929.

GIRL DIES IN 'SOUL PACT'

'Gang' Rush Tops Records

NOVELIST AND GIRL IN DEATH PACT

New York, July 20 (AP)—The death of Virginia Drew, 24-year-old student of literature and reincarnation, whose body was found floating in the Hudson River, furnished a mystery today.

The parents were inclined to place little credence in a report to police by Caroline Novotny, who described herself as a friend of Miss Drew, that the student had told her of a suicide pact with a novelist, but they asked a full investigation

It was established that Miss Drew had called on Maxwell Bodenheim, author of "Replenishing Jessica," on Sunday night. She was not seen again until her body was found yesterday.

The girl's father, a New York Central agent, said he did not believe his daughter had had a suicide pact with Bodenheim, but he felt that the novelist might have "something to explain" which would help clear up the mystery.

AIDED GIRL IN WORK

Bodenheim, police found, checked out from the hotel where the girl waited him, on Tuesday and his publishers said they had not been able to reach him since. Both Miss Novotny and Miss Drew's parents said that Bodenheim had been helping the girl with her writing and that she had seemed dejected over criticisms he had made of her work.

Miss Novotny said she and Miss Drew attended Cooper Union seven years ago to study commercial art A week ago Tuesday, she said, Miss Drew telephoned her she had had a stroke of fortune," a prominent novelist was going to aid her with her writing

Two days later, according to Miss Novotny, the girl called her aside saying the novelist had severely criticized her work. The novelist she said, disagreed with her opinion that she had her own style of writing That had "cut her to the heart."

"Miss Drew then told me 'he, too, is a believer in reincarnation We have made a suicide pact,'" Miss Novotny related.

Miss Novotny was surprised when she learned of Miss Drew's death, for she said she had persuaded the girl to beg off on the suicide pact and get the novelist to continue his teaching

Her friend had been a profound student of theosophy and evolution for years, according to Miss Novotny she recalled that some time ago Miss Drew said that when her life ended she would carry memories of this world into the next existence and that it would be a new experience to her

Miss Drew's mother revealed that Sunday night she had "a strange premonition" and before the daughter left obtained the novelist's name and address, which police are withholding

Her daughter, the mother revealed, had begged off from a motor ride with the family on the plea she had to consult the novelist about a book on theosophy she had written but had been unable to sell.

WED TONIGHT AT CHICAGO

Happy Lou "Slim" Gordon and Anne Bruce of Brookline will be married tonight at Chicago while Amelia Earhart looks on. "Slim" was Amelia's mechanic in the transatlantic flight. Wilmer Stultz, pilot of the Friendship plane, will attend.

BOSTON COMFY, PHILLY HOT, BUT MAINE SHIVERS

Toppled from its fuzzy perch by an east wind uncurest, the pernicious mercury today made strenuous efforts to stage a comeback but the local weather man predicts it has fallen too will not fully recover for 36 hours longer, at least

Greater Boston commuters entered the city environs today with the temperature at 68 above, a drop of 12 degrees over the past 24 hours

At the same hour, natives—and tourists—in the vicinity of Greenville, Me., set about building fires to overcome their chill while the thermometers registered 56 above and hardy fishermen on Rangeley Lakes piled on blankets through the night in a temperature of only 43 above.

While the rainstorm helped the cooling east wind to break the hot spell hereabouts it worked in the opposite direction in New Jersey and Pennsylvania Philadelphia today registered a mark of 82 above before noon, with Atlantic City trailing at 80 above at the same hour

EARHART GIRL PLANS AIR TOUR OF COUNTRY

Amelia Earhart, Boston's "Lady Girl" of transatlantic fame, will tour America in the plane she purchased from Lady Heath in England, announced today in Chicago in an interview on love and aviation

The love subject she dismissed as her usual terse fashion, declaring that if she is married it will not be soon, and that there is no reason for any person's name being coupled with hers yet

"No, I don't think I'll get married—that is, not real soon," she said. "I want to cling to my own life for a while and there isn't anyone whose name could be coupled with mine right now.

"I want to do some further experimenting in aviation. We must bring transatlantic flying nearer to men and women. Women can be a help to aviation by being its supporters."

Radio Fans to Listen-in on "Slim" Gordon's Wedding

Her mother and sister will attend tonight when Anne C. Bruce of Brookline, pretty fiance of Lou "Slim" Gordon, who flew the Atlantic with Amelia Earhart and Wilmer Stultz, is married to Gordon in Chicago.

Mrs. Bruce, and her younger sister, Dorothy, will remain at home however, hoping that a broadcast of the public ceremony will come over the air, that they may hear even if they do not see.

"Dad had to work and I had to stay with him," Dorothy said today. "We heard from Anne when she was in New York, but not since she has been in Chicago She must be too busy getting ready. Anyway mother is with her"

The mother and sister Margaret left for Chicago on Wednesday.

Omaha, Neb., July 20 (INS)—Five lives were lost in a terrific rain and electrical storm which struck this section during the night.

HURRY YOUR ENTRIES IN CONTEST!

Many New England parents are entering their children in the Boston Evening American's "Our Gang" movie contest as a direct result of urging by neighbors and friends who have noted the resemblance of their children to the principals in th egang

The rush to enter today topped all records

A large number of pictures entered have been accompanied by letters telling how the parents finally decided to enter their youngsters on account of the nature of per was living in the neighborhood or friends at more distant points

The hot weather mustn't affect the contest in the slightest. Snapshots and photographs are continuing to roll in in the interest of fire in large volume. The pictures reproduced in the American are picked at random The printing of a picture does not mean that the child has any better chance than others

Judging from the letters being received by the contest editor the boys and girls of New England are full of pep and talent. The aunts they perform and the things they can do, as told by the parents, indicate that many of them would be an asset to the movies.

$100 TO BE AWARDED

The child that wins this wonderful contest, $100 in cash will be awarded and a free trip across California for himself and his parent and an opportunity to be a real movie actor for three months at Hollywood in "Our Gang" comedies

These six will be selected by a board of judges at a personal appearance of the children at Loew's Orpheum theater toward the end of the contest late this month. All the children entered, who think they resemble "Mary Ann" of "Our Gang," will appear on one day. One child will be chosen by the judges

The next day all those who believe they look like "Jean Darling" will appear before the judges and one will be picked. This will be done until a "double" of each of the six principals of the gang has been chosen

These six will take the leading parts in a local "Our Gang" comedy to be staged in Boston, while all the other children entered may take part as extras. This film will be shown at the Orpheum.

If your child isn't entered, get busy. Only a few more days remain before the entry list expires.

Mary Perrotta of Pearl st Chelsea, sending her picture wrote:

I always dreamed of being in the movies and maybe this is my opportunity. They all tell me I look like Dolores Costello. I can dance, acrobatic, fancy, tap, Charleston and oriental. I hope you will give me a chance.

Eight-year-old Mary Elizabeth Littell, of Warwick rd., Belmont, thinks she resembles Jean Darling She wrote:

I think I look like Jean Darling, only I have long hair but I can have it cut off if I will make me look any more like her. We used to have an automobile but are pretty poor now. If I win, my mother can get back some of the things she lost. I can stand on my head, do the split, turn cartwheels and back bends. I hope I am the winner

Mrs. Beatrice Barnes of Main st., Springfield, writes:

I am enclosing two snapshots of my little girl Nora. She is 2½ years of age. Everyone raves about her looks and intelligence. She looks very much like Mary Ann Jackson of "Our Gang." She

It has been called to the attention of the management of the Boston Evening American that parents of children entered in the "Our Gang" movie contest are being solicited by telephone by unauthorized persons who claim to be employed by this newspaper.

The Boston Evening American does not employ any one to solicit either in person or by telephone, in connection with this contest and any person claiming to be a representative of this newspaper in such a capacity should be turned over to the police.

HAIL! GANG'S ALL HERE

NOW, YOU DOUBLES, THERE THEY ARE

Strike up the band, for here come the six snappy stars of "Our Gang," folks! Get busy, Kiddies, and rush to enter the big movie contest.

Are other bones more important?

So often mothers ignore the turned ankles of their boys and girls, as if they were something rather casual and meaningless. Yet if any other bones in those precious little bodies were so ill-formed, no sacrifice would be too great to try to straighten them. Are any bones in your child's body more important to you than any other ones?

New children's feet look to the Coward Arch Support Shoe. Note their upright position with no sign of sagging or arch weakness. Black and tan calf leathers in all leathers.

If your children's ankles "turn over", we seriously urge you to correct the condition immediately... and if they do not, to guard against it. Coward shoes for boys and girls are scientifically designed to prevent and correct such malformation. They keep ankles upright and true, they guide pliable bones into normal development. Bent ankles, twisted toes, bad arches are unknown among children who wear nothing but Cowards, from their first shoes on.

Dempsey Back As Fight Expert For Boston Evening American

The Boston Evening American has secured the biggest sport feature of the year by signing up Jack Dempsey to cover the Tunney-Heeney fight for its readers.

The former champion will write four special articles for these pages.

In the first two, Tiger Jack will size up the rivals and tell how they look to him.

In the third, he will pick the winner and give the reasons for his choice.

The fourth article will be a ringside version of the battle by the former heavyweight king, who will view hostilities from the press row in the Yankee Stadium, next Thursday night. This will be the BIG Story of the fight.

In addition to Dempsey, the Boston Evening American will have other nationally known fistic authorities at the bout, insuring the readers of this paper a most complete version of the contest.

Included on the list of experts will be Jack Conway, boxing editor of the Boston Evening American; Nick Flatley, sports editor of the Boston Evening American; Damon Runyon, Davis Walsh, Bill Corum, Sid Mercer, Jim Corbett and many others.

Don't fail to reserve a copy of the Boston Evening American if you want the best and most complete account of the Tunney-Heeney bout.

Heeney Stock Rising; Tunney Eases Up on Work

CHALLENGER MAY UPSET DOPE IN TITLE BATTLE

By SID MERCER

New Haven, N. J., July 20—A strong Heeney sentiment is stabbing at the hitherto unbroken front of the one hundred percent Tunney club, which has heretofore enjoyed some confidence in the prowess of the talented champion.

Some of the members of this club who have been steeped in the Tunney influence of speculator are beginning to drift in here now to look at the negative side of next Thursday night at the Yankee Stadium and are prepared to learn that the New Jersey cannibal may bust up the party.

Gene Tunney expected to get four or five rounds in the ring at the Rossiter training camp here today for the last workout before he left for New York. "Tunney isn't going to have any picnic with this fellow. I never saw him before today, but they told me he was just a big strong fellow, a tough punch absorber. He opened my eyes today. And you, I have not made my selection yet, but a cultured fellow who can keep on top of his man all the time and throw punches as often as Heeney does, can't be dismissed as a set-up.

"He reminds me a lot of Tom Sharkey. He's taller, heavier and Speculator, N. Y., July 20—"He can't jab. He can't hook. He can't punch. All he can do is stay in there and take it. But I must admit he can do that until the cows come home."

Thus does Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion of the world, describe Tom Heeney, challenger for the heavyweight crown. He is here to watch Tunney spar today.

While Tom doesn't believe the Gene can knock out the rough and ready Maine blacksmith, he does think that there is a strong probability of the bout being stopped to save Heeney from punishment.

Tunney is anxious to get through with these days in an effort to conserve energy for the test to come. He will make one of his last three appearances in his beloved Speculator camp this afternoon.

Unless his plans are changed he won't work out tomorrow, Friday or Saturday, but Sunday he will put up and will be seen.

Gene got a slight cut on his face in the bathroom of his old cottage. It is not serious.

Because he thought it might have a bad effect on the habits of the young men of the nation, Gene Tunney has refused an offer of $10,000 to indorse a cigarette advertisement.

Tunney doesn't smoke. And the cigarette manufacturers didn't want him to say that he did. All they asked for their ten grand was for Gene to say:

"These must be good cigarettes because all my friends smoke them. You'll have to admit $10,000 is a lot of money for that. Tunney thought so, too. But he thought more of the health of young America.

He said, "No."

A LOTT DEPENDS on you, John. John Hennessey, U. S. tennis ace, is teaming up with George Lott and Francis Hunter in the Davis Cup matches.

Can Hennessey and Lott Fill Bill's Shoes?

Big Bill Tilden, long-time standby of United States Davis Cup teams, is out in the cold as far as playing in the international matches is concerned.

No less John Hennessey and George Lott must bear the brunt of the Davis Cup team work. They have some fine opponents to face.

Hennessey and Lott are the doubles team now. Francis Hunter and Hennessey are the singles entries. They have to beat the Italian team before they can meet the French team, which holds the Davis Cup.

LONGMEADOW GOLFER BEATS SLATTERY, 5-3

By BILL GRIMES

In the third round of the Massachusetts junior championship golf tourney played at the Unicorn Country Club today, John Healy of Longmeadow eliminated John Slattery of Scituate, 5 and 3, in the only one-sided match of the day.

All other matches were close and hard fought, two of them going to the home green before a decision was reached.

Healy, who is one of the longest hitters in the state, jumped Slattery at the start of their match, winning five of the first seven holes. Healy opened his attack against Slattery with a fine four and this set a mild pace for the second, where he added a great deal more to the trap already dug for Slattery, too timid Holt and he dropped to 3 up down by messing up the short fourth.

WINS FIRST HOLE.

Healy won home at the long fifth with a drive and a spade, but he was put the green for a half. Going to the sixth Healy drove over the trap at the foot of the hill and won the hole with a four as Slattery put his second in the trap. The Longmeadow player picked up another hole in the seventh with a three and then Slattery won the next hole when Healy's second shot, the eighth, hit a tractor which was carelessly left in the middle of the fairway.

Slattery picked up another hole with a birdie four at the 9th and he was 3 down at the turn. At the 11th Slattery passed up an opportunity to win his third consecutive hole by missing another short putt.

Going to the 11th Slattery's tee shot was only a dozen feet from the tin, but Healy dropped his within two feet of the cup to win the hole with a par 4. At the 523-yard 12th hole, Healy was home in two and won the hole with a birdie 4. The 13th found Healy losing his ball and Slattery winning the hole with a 4 and after Healy had halved the 14th, Slattery made it come 4.

The Longmeadow boy took the 15th with a par 4 and the match 5 and 3.

EATON BROWN MATCH

Charles S. Eaton and Leo Brown had a great match. Eaton piled up a 3-hole lead by the time they had reached the 7th, but Brown got one back with an eagle on the 8th. Eaton went to 3 up at the 12th, then Brown picked up two holes but was unable to square the match, losing 1 down.

Eaton 3 putted himself into a half at the first hole and then they halved the 2nd with 4's. Brown missed a 3-foot putt to get down in one putt. It looked as though the 3rd hole was going to be halved in 4's but Brown missed a short putt and Eaton took the lead.

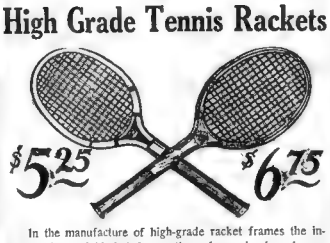
Apparently the downfall affected Brown, for he lost the following two holes to par golf. After they had halved the 5th and 7th at par, they stepped off a shot at the 8th. Eaton was on the side of the hill by the 6th tee and he was stymied by a tree which forced him to play out sideways. The 6th way, after which he pulled his third shot and took him 4 to get home.

Brown had missed his drive and played only a fair second shot. After getting home in two, Brown 3-putted from the hole with 6. Two rimmers were at the 9th landed Brown 3-feet from the tin and he dropped a 4 for an eagle, which halved Eaton's lead to 2 up at the turn.

Going to the 11th, Eaton was just off the green on the 193-yard hole and was down with a 3. Brown missed a putt after getting out of the trap.

The next hole Brown won the 11th where he reached the green and was down for a 3 win, and Eaton took a 4.

"SECONDS" OF High Grade Tennis Rackets



In the manufacture of high-grade racket frames the inspection is so rigid that frequently a frame is classed as a "second" because of some slight defect or blemish.

We have a limited number of such "SECONDS." You will find it hard to see just why the factory so rated them. We guarantee that no racket in this lot has any defect of a nature to affect its strength or playing qualities.

U. S. Olympic Squad Reaches Amsterdam

Amsterdam, Holland, July 20 (AP)—The American Olympic team, in fine fettle and ready for the historic games at the Amsterdam Stadium, arrived aboard the steamship President Roosevelt at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon.

The President Roosevelt was sighted entering Amsterdam harbor about 1:30 p. m. and at 1:50 the vessel was in the dock amid the cheers of many spectators who crowded the pier to welcome the American athletes.

The official welcoming party included Consul Gen. Charles L. Hooper, Mrs. Hoover, Joseph MacCabe, in charge of the Olympic committee's Amsterdam office, G. T. Kirby, president of the Olympic committee, Amsterdam officials and a group of American rooters.

Find Sponge in Nose of Race Horse

New York, July 20 (INS)—A result of the finding of a sponge in the nostril of Alan Allen, winner of the fifth race at the Empire City race track, Yonkers, the stewards of the jockey club have revoked the license of "Sarge" McKee, a negro trainer.

His case was held for further investigation before final disposition is made.

McKee is alleged to have placed the sponge in the nostril of the horse earlier in the day and after the horse was to have gone to the post.

The track was discovered and the findings turned over to the stewards of the Empire City race track in turn handed the affair to the jockey club officials.

Mack to Get $15,000 as Hub Garden Matchmaker

PLANS TO STAGE FIRST BOUT IN THE FALL

By JACK CONWAY

GREETINGS,—Eddie Mack, matchmaker of Boston's New Garden at the North Station.

The official documents have been signed and Mack is in complete charge of the boxing end of the program at Tex Rickard's great playhouse.

Jack Conway

The leading spirit of the Argonne A. A. will continue his old-time promotions at Royce hall during the summer months. In the fall, he will open the New Garden in a blaze of glory. Mack stated today that Johnny McGrath and Mike Green, who have been associated with him in the Argonne A. A., will probably also be with him at his new post. They are men experienced in boxing affairs and would be of tremendous value to Eddie and his associates.

Mack's contract with the New Garden calls for a salary of $10,000 a year and in addition 10 per cent of the profits of the boxing shows. With any kind of a break in the game Mack will pull down at least $15,000 a year.

A rather princely salary for a young man of some 34 years who, to quote his own language, is a graduate of the "School of Hard Knocks."

Sheldon H. Fairbanks, general manager of the Boston Madison Square Garden, declared Mack's first show will be staged as a Crosscup-Phelon Post carnival. Mack will work in conjunction with Gabe Stern, vice-commander of the Legion.

THE career of the new matchmaker of the Boston Garden has been a colorful one. He was born in Boston on February 12, 1859, Lincoln's Birthday.

From Boston Eddie went to Worcester and from there to New York. He returned to Boston with his mother after the death of his father.

At 14 Mack was obliged to leave school in order to help support his family. When 17 he was head skate boy at the Park Square rink.

It was there that Mack got his first insight into the boxing game. Alex MacLean was interested in the managing of the rink and also in the management of Jack Johnson, who later became heavyweight champion of the world.

Mack assisted in training Johnson and traveled around the country with the negro star when the latter was boxing.

At one time Mack thought he could box himself, but after a few lessons decided to return to the managing and training end of the game.

"Fighters come and fighters go," Mack often remarked, "but the managers go on forever."

BESIDES Johnson, Mack worked with Stanley Ketchel, Billy Papke, Abe Attell, Johnny Kilbane, Buck Crouse, Frank Crouse, Tommy O'Keefe, Bob Moha, Leo Houck, Ray Bronson, Harry Lewis, Dave Deshler and Young Donahue.

He managed Joe Eagan, Johnny Clinton, Abe Friedman, Joe Chick, Willie Harmon and many others.

Eddie always had a genius for ballyhoo. He would take a boxer of little account and talk him into the big money.

Like most successful managers, Eddie was loyal to the boxers under his direction. He would fight for them as hard out of the ring as he demanded them to battle when in action.

Eddie's career as a matchmaker dates back to the old Pilgrim A. A. when he acted as assistant to Alex MacLean. He later assumed the matchmaking duties at the Commercial Club where the late Tiger Flowers was his ace.

It was only natural that Mack should want a club of his own and so he organized the Argonne Club, His slogan of "Fifty Rounds of Boxing at a Penny a Round" was something new to boxing. It drew big houses and made money for Mack and his associates.

BESIDES color, Mack has personality. He makes friends easily and stands up well under severe competition.

This is to be expected of a man who was among the first to answer the call to the colors in the World War. Eddie saw service in France, being wounded in the Argonne offensive.

Eddie is married and lives with his wife and daughter on Weld st., West Roxbury.

Rickard is fortunate he was able to launch his Boston Garden at a time when he could secure the services as matchmaker of Eddie Mack.

GENTLEMAN GENE' TOPS 'GENTLEMAN JIM'

When James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champ, arrived at Gene Tunney's camp, the first thing he did was to compare his height with that of the present champ. Gene tops Jim, but the latter shows he has kept much of the marvelous physique of his younger days.

has better underpinning than the old sailor. He don't hit so hard, but he hits more often than Sharkey did.

I am convinced now that condition will be an important factor perhaps the biggest one issue.

"I look for this fight to go the limit. Along about the seventh round it may develop into a question of strength and endurance. If Tunney can demonstrated his staying powers he is in for a tough evening. Of course something may happen to upset all the dope one man may be cut or have a hand crippled.

"Tunney will have to be careful with his hands. He's never punched at a man as big or as unyielding as this fellow."

BENEFIT GAME BOOSTED BY BOB QUINN

"If the crowd is too large for any field in this city, you can play the game at Fenway Park" President Bob Quinn of the Boston Red Sox told those who gathered at the Executive Rotary Club to complete plans for the twi game which the Carrigans and the Locke Club of Everett will play August 9 for the benefit of the families of the victims of the Boston Oil explosion.

"Go out and sell fifty or seventy-five thousand tickets for the game," the Sox head said, "and I promise you that we will find room for them at Fenway.

"And let's make sure we get as much out of the receipts as we can. I will have a day for them at Fenway Park, free of charge.

"Bill Carrigan and I are only too glad to send the Red Sox out here to play and do anything else in our power for such a deserving cause, and if you citizens of Everett will do your part in selling tickets, I am sure a big sum will be realized."

Mayor Roche, Chairman and the other members of the committee of representative citizens of Everett, thanked the Sox boss for what he is doing to make the game a success and promised to do all their time and energy to aid in the affair.

He told the gathering that the 36 children who are fatherless as a result of the explosion are beginning life under a great handicap, and that he, personally, and the game which he rules over would do all in their power to help these orphans.

U. S. Wins Davis Cup Singles From Italy

[illegible] went on to outplay his opponent in the final four games of a smooth most impressive.

The gallery openly resented a decision against Hennessey in the eighth game and, two games earlier, murmured its discontent when the umpire called a foot fault against the American on the game point.

[illegible] decision seemed to disconcert Hennessey, but with the prompting of cries sent before him, he rallied grandly and had the baron badly on the run during the latter part of the [illegible]

In fact, so weary was De Morpurgo from the pace that he had literally to walk to combat Hennessey's drives and agile [illegible] in the final set.

The American's play throughout the second set was both sound and sensational. He outlasted the count in two rallies to win the first two games, the opening one of which went to deuce three times. De Morpurgo took the third behind his service and Johnny repeated this performance in the fourth.

HENNESSEY DEFIES BARON

Then, with the baron serving in the fifth, Hennessey suddenly unleashed a display of acrobatics, advancing to within a foot of the net and defying the baron to pass him.

Johnny returned everything that came his way, finally ending the rally with an angled volley while standing with his back to the net. The effort seemed to tire John somewhat, as De Morpurgo ran the game to deuce and then caught Johnny napping with a high lob.

Hennessey ran back for a surprising return, which was slapped over the rodder while going away from the net. The baron thought his shot was unplayable and allowed it to fall good for a point.

However, the Italian outlasted Hennessey in the ensuing rallies to win the game.

Hennessey carried the next three to deuce and in games of 5-3, the latter making an exception to an official's ruling at this point. The decision apparently favored the Italian.

The gallery also failed to take kindly to a decision in the next game, where Hennessey allowed time to take a leave of love-40 but John rallied to make it deuce.

However, the umpire called a foot fault on Hennessey, much to the American's apparent amusement, and De Morpurgo took the game.

Hennessey carried the next three to deuce and in games of 5-3, the latter making an exception to an official's ruling at this point. The decision apparently favored the Italian.

The gallery also failed to take kindly to a decision in the next game, where Hennessey allowed time to take a leave of love-40 but John rallied to make it deuce.

However, the umpire called a foot fault on Hennessey, much to the American's apparent amusement, and De Morpurgo took the game.

UMPIRE UPSETS HENNESSEY

Hennessey was in the middle of his service when the official called 'fault' in a loud voice. Johnny seemed to be considerably disconcerted by the incident, for he lost the seventh game with an erratic display and, while he started the eighth with a flash of speed, De Morpurgo finally prevailed in spite of a bad shaking up he received from a fall in returning one of the American's shots.

Johnny immediately rushed to the net to offer assistance to his opponent but the latter waved him away, smilingly, and finally took the game on points, although the gallery loudly protested a shot it thought out of court.

It then was Hennessey's turn again to display his innate sportsmanship, motioning the crowd to silence.

Hennessey then pulled himself together and began to play tennis. The set point was in this game, the ninth, and both men fell back on a crafty defensive, neither going to the net unless a "kill" seemed certain. The baron, covered with red clay from his fall, hardly looked able to play strong tennis.

He was breathing heavily and only in desperation did he chase Hennessey's shrewd shots to the side lines. He finally weakened under the fire of the American's attack and lost the ninth game.

In the tenth, the set point was four times within De Morpurgo's grasp but Hennessey fought off defeat valiantly and, finally, with sharply-angled passing shots, took the tenth, evening the count at 8-all.

The Baron's fine Italian hand failed him in the eleventh game, which Hennessey won after a crafty duel in which both centered their efforts on trying to coax the other out of position. Forced errors finally ruined De Morpurgo in this game. The twelfth and final game saw Hennessey win behind service but not before set-point had escaped him twice.

BARON TIRED OUT.

De Morpurgo seemingly was following in the footsteps of his compatriot, Gaslini, as he took the court for his final stand in the third set. He was visibly fagged and Johnny ran through the first two games without opposition, taking the second game without the loss of a point.

However, the Italian still had a kick left in him and produced it in the next game to win at 4—2 after an uphill battle. The baron's physical state was beginning to get on his nerves, for he showed his impatience when a ball was hit in front of the net in the fourth game.

Hennessey merely smiled but the baron raved his racquet impotently. Errors caused him the loss of the game utterly.

Another rally by the baron featured the fifth game, the point-ending stroke to deuce before Hennessey smashed his way to victory. The latter seemed careless in the sixth, for he permitted the baron to run the points to love—40 against his service before he flashed out with his usual speed.

This carried him to deuce but successive nets finally gave the game to the Italian.

The play in both men was obviously slower in the seventh, the Italian's because he was all in and Hennessey's because he elected to play it safe. In spite of the latter going to Hennessey had no trouble in winning the game, making his complete victory certain.

This he achieved in the following game in which the baron proved an easy prey to Johnny's confident, well-placed drives.

Fifteen rushed on the court when it was all over to warmly grasp Hennessey's hand, while real American cheers went up from the stands as the winning point slid off Johnny's inspired racquet.

It was the greatest triumph in the rather vivid career of this Indianapolis youth and he took it with his customary grace, smiling happily and waving his hand to the shouts of congratulations.

A Woman with the Appetite of an Ostrich.

Martha Lee Tells of Cheese in Menu

MEAL planning to many home-makers becomes a great task during the summer season because of the general waning appetite of the members of the family and the corresponding lack of enthusiasm and pep on the part of the homemaker. The lack of desire for food is due in part to lack of exercise, and the desire to eat over a wide little as possible.

Martha Lee

But we shall agree that no matter what the temperature, we must eat. And if the desire is not there it becomes the responsibility of the homemaker to prepare dishes containing the food elements necessary for proper nutrition and have these dishes appealing to the eye and taste that they will be irresistible to the user.

As a rule one prefers cool or cold dishes during the hot season. But we know from experience that a meal consisting entirely of cold dishes will not give the good nutritious meal that should be one of the chief requirements of at least one hot dish or one beverage.

This dish doesn't necessarily have to be stewing, as we often serve high in fat content. It is not, however, contain sufficient protein to promote a proper nutritional balance.

Cheese and eggs form excellent foods for a basis of light weather diet. Cheese is a protein food, contains some fat, is rich in minerals content and, therefore, is an ideal food.

Fresh vegetables served with grated cheese or cheese sauce may be used as the basis for the noon day lunch. Their flavor and nutritional value of mashed potatoes is enhanced considerably by the use of grated cheese.

Creamed eggs to which have been added one half cup of grated American cheese are not only more attractive in appearance, and taste but very satisfying. Toasted cheese sandwiches served with crisp lettuce and baby radishes can make more piquant with a teaspoon of mayonnaise to which has been added a dash of mustard, are always a treat.

Here are some other cheese dishes that I am sure your family will thoroughly enjoy.

Green Corn, Tomato and Cheese—One tbsp. butter, 2 c. grated cheese, ½ c. canned or grated fresh corn, 1 tbsp. green pepper, ½ c. tomato puree, 2 cups milk, 1 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, 1 clove garlic, 4 slices bread.

Melt butter add cheese and mix. Add corn and pimento, salt, pepper and mix and add the garlic which is cut and mixed with the tomato puree and the salt and pepper. Have ready the bread toast I on a buttered dish with garlic cut in it.

Pour the mixture over the untoasted side of the bread and serve at once. A poached egg sometimes placed on top of each portion, making a very nutritious combination.

Cream Macaroni and Cheese—One cup macaroni broken into small pieces, 2 cups boiling salted water, ½ cup milk, 2 cups thin sauce, ½ c. tomato sauce, ½ c. or more grated cheese.

Cook the macaroni in the boiling salted water in the onion and cloves. Drain, remove the onion and cloves, reheat in tomato sauce, and serve with grated cheese.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee.

DeMille May Be M. G. M. Studio Director

LOS ANGELES, July 20—The Colonial mansion at Culver City, known as the De Mille Studios, will cease to function under that title. Cecil De Mille has sold his studio and his contract to Pathe Company, now governed by Joseph Kennedy. Once he has made the sale and begins free to look about, Mr. De Mille finds himself fairly besieged with offers from companies who know his value as a director.

At one time it looked as if everything were arranged for him to go to United Artists. It was rumored that even the buildings were in readiness for his occupancy. Now it seems fairly certain that C. B. and Louis B. Mayer will get together.

Mr. Mayer has been in daily conference with Mr. De Mille, and it is more than likely that contracts will be signed between Mr. Mayer and Mr. De Mille within the next 24 hours. That means that C. B. will move the megaphone, the far-famed puttees and his director's chair to the M G M Studios.

WE haven't written the name of Tom Moore in this column in a coon's age. Perhaps that is because Tom has been taking a rest and not making as many pictures as he did a few months ago. But he is back in the thick of the fight now with two pictures on his list and 'rarin' to go. 'The Last Haul' and 'The Yellow Back,' the latter a famous Oliver Curwood story, was published serially in Hearst's International Magazine. Both of these are F B O pictures.

Nash Beery is to make two pictures, one of them 'The Iced Sword,' and the other, 'Love in the Desert.' George Melford will direct the latter and needless to say, after my introduction both of them will bear the F B O trademark.

NEW YORK'S debonair mayor had a chance to see some real life in Hollywood when he visited the Montmartre at the Wednesday luncheon. I don't know whether Jimmy was to be among 'em, or whether the fans were tipped off that Gloria Swanson, Charlie Chaplin, Constance Talmadge, Buster Collier, Betty Bronson and a few more were lunching with him. But never have I seen such a crowd. It took two traffic policemen to clear the walks to permit Jimmy and Charlie Chaplin to get through the crowd. Even Eddie Brandstatter's plea that the fans please stand back was futile. When you see such a demonstration as that you cease being cynical and you stop wondering if the movie stars really are as popular as they were a few years ago. Jimmy was all for going into the kitchen to see if any more of the public were lurking there, or maybe it was to escape the crowds.

Which Power Is the Greater, Money or Love?

CHAPTER XVI

LILY glared at Carrie, and Carrie glared back at her. Then all at once she shrugged her shoulders and laughed.

"No wonder you want it, Miss Lily," she said, looking at the ragged, soiled card in Lily's hands. "Your mother would be proud and happy to find Pat's picture in your room, wouldn't she?"

Without a word Lily tore the card into tiny bits and tossed them into the rose-trimmed waste basket under her dressing table.

"Maybe she'd understand why you and Pat disappeared with the car this morning without saying a word to anybody, so that she had to ask Mrs. Cain to take her to the church luncheon this noon." Carrie's voice ran on maliciously. "I told her you had asked me to pack a lunch for two and had gone away with just Pat—with just the chauffeur. And I told the same thing to Mr. Drummond when he stopped in to ask about you and your headache. . . . Your headache!—Huh!"

Lily tried hard to keep her temper, Mrs. Lexington had taught her never to quarrel with anyone who was working in the houses.

But anger flashed in her gray eyes and her voice trembled with fury when she answered the little housemaid. "Carrie," she said, "you've worked in this family too many years. I think you'd be happier if you went up to your room and packed your trunk. We'll send it to you tomorrow—or whenever you find a new place to work."

Carrie tossed her head. "I'll be finding a new place to work when your mother asks me to leave this house, and not before I'm not taking orders from you," she snapped. "And I guess your mother won't be letting me go in a hurry, either. Not while she's owing me six weeks' salary!" And with that she flounced out of the bedroom, leaving every thing in wild disorder behind her—dust pan in the middle of the floor, the bed covered with the contents of the dresser drawers, the bottle of floor polish standing in a corner beside the mop.

A minute later Lily heard her talking cheerfully and loudly to Pat in the back yard.

She ran to the hall window and looked out. Carrie was sitting in the hammock couch beside Pat, the starched pink shirt of her housemaid's uniform around her, her chestnut hair shone in the sunlight, and her round cheeks were very pink. Lily her eyes narrowed. She had to own that she was a pretty little woman.

She threw the hall window up and called to Pat. "Will you please come in here Pat, and do some work for me?"

Then she slammed down the window.

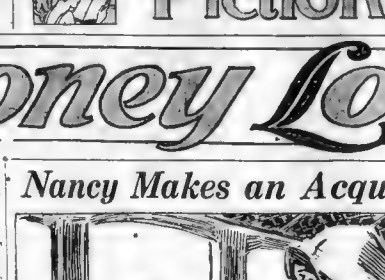
Pat stood on the threshold of the room, almost as if he were not going to enter it.

"My shoes are muddy," he said, his eyes going over the figured carpet, the white bearskin rug beside the bed, the big puffy cushions of rainbow silks that were piled up before the empty grate.

Nancy Makes an Acquaintance



The girl showed Nancy her hands.

He Stepped Gingerly Into The Dainty, Perfumed Place

"Never mind. . . . I want you to put those drawers into the dressing table for me," Lily told him, and he stepped gingerly into the dainty, perfumed place as if he were walking on eggs or thin ice.

He stooped for a minute before the little powder table between the north window. It was littered with powder puffs, with perfume bottles, with scented hair oil, with boxes of powder, and jars of cream.

"Gosh, what do you do with all that stuff?" he asked. "It looks like the shelf in a barber shop—that little table." He laid the drawers straight blunt fingers on a gold tipped bottle.

"That's a powder table," Lily told him, laughing. "And I use all that 'stuff' as you call it, on my face. Mr. Pat Francis! Creams and perfums and powder and lipstick. The oil in that bottle you're touching is for my hair. . . . It smells like a lemon grove."

She pulled out the gold stopper and sniffed at it. "That's what makes my hair so nice and sweet," she said, smiling up at him. "Ain't all the rest of the things we use nice to look at—for my Pat to look at."

Pat groaned aloud. His head picked up a scent bottle of black glass and was looking at the price-mark pasted upon the bottom of it.

"Eighteen dollars! Whew!" He whistled. "It would take me three days of hard work to earn that one bottle of perfume for you, Lily." He set it down, his face drawn into lines of discouragement and hopelessness.

But Lily laughed at him. "Indeed I'll have to get along without perfume — or use vanilla instead. Wouldn't I, Pat?" she asked. She stood on tiptoe and kissed him on the nose, and was where she wanted to be—in his arms.

And thus it was that Carrie came upon them, a few minutes later, as she opened the open door on her way upstairs to her own room—one of the little rooms under the eaves—and each other, their lips locked, deaf and blind to everyone but themselves.

They did not see her or hear her, and she went on up stairs, leaving the locked door down and began to pack her yellow tin trunk. . . . She had exchanged her uniform for anything with the Lexingtons until Mrs. Lexington discharged her, after all, for she had not done anything, she asked herself, when the only man she had ever loved and who loved her had fallen in love with the daughter of the house?

A half hour later she walked out of the side door, leaving behind her the tin trunk and the six weeks' back pay, together with a note asking Mrs. Lexington to send both of them to her brother's house.

Pat saw her go from the window of his room above the garage and thought nothing of it.

Lily Saw Her, Too, and Knew Why She Had Gone

Lily saw her, too, and knew why she had gone. She ran downstairs and found the note she had left for Mrs. Lexington. She tore it open to find out if Carrie had written anything about herself and Pat in it. She had. . . . She had written everything she knew about them!

"Dear Mrs. Lexington," she had written, in her neat, round hand, "Miss Lily has just told me to leave the house, and I am going. She is jealous of me because Pat, the insurfear, likes me too well to suit her."

"Please send my trunk and the $96 you owe me right away to my brother's house, where I am going. His name is Charles Petrie, and his address is—"

Lily read no more.

She slipped the note into the pocket of her dress and carried it upstairs to her own room. She locked the door and carefully wrote another note in Carrie's neat hand, leaving out the bit about Pat and herself.

Then she sealed it and took it downstairs to her mother's desk. It did not occur to her that she was doing a dishonest thing—committing a forgery—writing a lie.

She smiled to herself at her own cleverness as she laid it down upon a pile of bills for her own wedding clothes—for princess slips of apple blossom pink and robin's egg blue—for silk stockings, satin slippers, paste buckles—for gloves and dressing and hats. All of it ruinent for Staley Drummond's bride!

Mrs. Lexington came home from her luncheon at church at 5 o'clock.

She came home all primed and ready to discharge Francis, the chauffeur, and changed her mind almost the minute she set foot in the house.

For Agnes, the fat and placid cook who had been with the Lexington's for a long time, met her at the door with the bad news that Carrie had left—and left for good.

"And what with a wedding coming on and all, I don't know what we're going to do without her," said Agnes. "She was so nice and handy for answering the door and setting the table and keeping the downstairs dusted and the like — now, wasn't she, Mrs. Lexington, ma'am?"

Mrs. Lexington collapsed in a chair and kicked off the black satin pumps that had been torturing her all afternoon.

"Well, Agnes," she said, "there's nothing for us to do but to turn Carrie's work over to Pat for a few days, isn't there? We've got to have some help in the house—especially now."

She read Carrie's note—or rather, the note that Lily had written and signed with Carrie's name.

Then she tore it up. "The ungrateful girl!" she sighed, pitying herself, "to walk out of the house like that, after all I've done for her! I taught her everything she knows about housework, and even paid her expenses at the hospital two years ago when she had her tonsils out—and this is the thanks I get!"

She was in a fine rage by the time she had changed her dress, put on a pair of big comfortable shoes, and knocked on the locked door of her daughter's room.

Lily had been making up the sleep she had lost that morning by getting up so early. One side of her face was rosy and crumpled where she had pressed it into the embroidered pillow. Her kimono—a brilliant affair thing that had cost more than the amount of Carrie's back wages—was wrinkled, too, and she was rubbing her dreamy, sleepy eyes.

"Hello, mother," she yawned. "Where were you and Mrs. Cain going today when Pat and I passed you on the road?"

She knew perfectly well where they had been going.

"Pat and I," repeated Mrs. Lexington, furiously. "What do you mean by sitting up in the drivers seat with him? You head on his shoulder, too! Lily, I could cry when I think of it! You, engaged to a man like Staley Drummond and carrying on with a chauffeur!"

Lily covered electric light bulbs, as they appeared.

"I got a new roomer for you," Ginger said, "Miss O'Day I want to acquaint you with Mrs. Carmondy."

Nancy's "how do you do, Mrs. Carmondy," was uttered so faintly that she hardly heard herself. She gulped, and tried to smile. . . . She wanted to scream and run from the house and away from these people.

"Sorry, dearie, but there ain't one room vacant just now, and I won't have an empty till the first after to morrow when Mr. Schmaltz goes."

Nancy breathed more easily again She was just going to pick up her baggage, glad to escape into the dark street, when Ginger spoke up.

"What do you say if Nancy stays with me for a couple a' nights 'till Schmaltz goes, kiddo, what say?"

Then the next moment Nancy found herself following Ginger up the tiny dark stairs, and into a room with a sloping ceiling. When Ginger threw open the door a wave of stale, hot, perfume laden air struck Nancy in the face. She shied up the room at a glance.

On the floor, at the foot of the bed, probably where she had stepped out of them, were peach colored step-ins. A greyette nightgown of a violent orange hue hung over the foot of the unmade bed. Every thing was in the greatest disorder start going to any parties."

She was talking too much. Nancy knew it, but her tongue just would go on. It seemed a relief for her nervousness to tell someone.

"Say little yellow head," cried Jerry, "where you want to come a right over to The Carmondy where Ginger lives, eh, Ginger?"

"The Carmondy," Ginger told Nancy, was a rooming house in the South End. And from conversation between Ginger and Jerry she learned that it was run by a Mrs. Carmondy. The rooms were "reasonable" they told her, but its chief asset was the fact that Mrs. Carmondy could mind her own business She decided to take a chance on Mrs. Carmondy's rooming house. What impulse tempted her to make the decision she could not explain, except she was tense with the spirit of adventure.

She was absolute on her own. She was thirsty for life and excitement. Here was a girl beside her, not much older than Nancy herself, who seemed to be ever so sure of herself, gay bubbling with the joy of living, for all her complaints about her sunburn, unafraid.

And here was a youth named Jerry, good looking, well dressed, owning a fine car. He was so sure of himself too.

If Mrs. Carmondy was "broad minded," the mind must be in proportion to all her other dimensions Nancy thought. When the trio, Ginger, Nancy and Jerry stepped from a taxi in front of the big, dingy brick rooming house Nancy's heart thumped

"Whatever am I doing?" thought, "I must be crazy!"

Mrs. Carmondy had just come into the front hall to turn on one of the

Periscope! Some Fine Heroism

By JOHN KNOX

CHAPTER II.

THE ships which represented the honor of the United States Navy in Quiberon Bay the night munitions transport Florence H. went to a flaming end were not the proud battleships of the first line or even smaller fighting ships with the smartness of youth in their lines. Three of them were ancient torpedo boats of so old a vintage that they looked strange to the eyes of sailors trained on the new fleet, for the Truxton and the Whipple, like the Stewart—"Old Ironsides"—had seen 30 years of service.

The other five fighting ships which played their part that thrilling night were all former private yachts purchased by the government and converted to the uses of war. And they were a motley and pathetic. One submarine whose captain had the nerve to come up and fight could have sunk the lot of them in half an hour or less—but there was no fighting superannuated or feeble about the men they carried on their decks. The type of sailor our navy developed fights with the same vigor whether he be on a superannuated or a raft; whether it is for a principle or enemy or one of the forces of nature. This night these old Cinderellas of the fleet fought a battle against a flame covered sea. It was a new kind of enemy for sailors to fight; no code of action and no tactics were in the textbooks for this warfare. Each officer and each man had to meet the unexpected as though it were the usual and to fight this strange foe without weapons other than the strength of the stout hearts and hands.

There were five yachts in this battle against fire and death—the Wanderer, Sirdar, Elsinore, Corona, and the little Christabel, of whom we have heard before. Built for pleasure cruising in smooth tropic waters, their keels laid to serve the relaxed hours of their wealthy owners, their craft were as much out of their element as silk in a slaughterhouse. They could float, and engines they had and they could carry guns of a sort, but war asked much more of them than that. Their smooth decks, laid for the feet of dancers, were scarred and defaced with gun mounts and the racks of depth charges. Their once luxurious saloons were stripped of their finery to serve the Spartan needs of fighting men at sea. Once more it was the men, not the ship, who threw the deciding weight in the scales of Fate.

This April night they were one with the berserk rage against the strange foe which animated the old torpedo boats. Let us read the tale of the Wanderer, first.

Lieut.-Com. P. L. Wilson of the Wanderer, senior officer of the patrol squadron, had a perfect strategic angle to the story with his tale of the mysterious signal light. He writes:

"Our attention was directed to some one on the bridge of the Florence H. who was signalling with a signal searchlight. Suddenly, without warning, the Florence H. burst into brilliant flame, which did not subside, but, on the contrary, in a moment entirely enveloped the ship and shot up about a hundred feet into the air. There were no explosions felt or heard. The fire continued to rage and for about ten minutes she split open amidships and sank about five minutes later.

"I signalled our convoy to proceed to anchorage and stood over to the Florence H. Two small launches there was elected from the ship a mass of burning cases and boxes which spread out to leward like enormous rafts, so thick were they packed. On each of these packed masses of wreckage every second cases were exploding and shooting their contents in all cases into the air like enormous blowtorches, the flames roaring from 10 to 20 feet and making a whistling noise like acetylene torches.

"We picked up almost all the escorts of the south-bound convoy and all lowered lifeboats. The boats had great difficulty in getting to the men in the water as the wreckage was so thick that rowing was out of the question and they had to resort to polling. Three men were on a boat, a leading hand hemmed in by other wreckage and ammunition cases. The Stewart steamed alongside the last and pulled the men aboard. Several of the men of the Stewart jumped overboard to hold up injured and burned men and succeeded in saving them. This act is considered especially meritorious as many of the survivors were burned about the head and arms after they got away from the ship and while in the water.

"Each and every man who went out in small boats did so at great risk of life and their conduct is deserving of commendation. It is desired to commend the action of all patrol boats on the scene, who, at great risk, went into this burning wreckage and exploding ammunition, the destroyers being especially conspicuous in that they steamed through it.

"Above all, a fearless and magnificent example was set by the Stewart."

We could go on with page after page of reports by the officers of the various ships, quoting example after example of heroism, but space will not permit us this luxury. A few plain lists here and there will draw the picture a little more plainly—just random sentences lifted from the thick pile of reports in the Navy Department: files.

"The heroism of the mass of wreckage may be appreciated by the fact that at one time it jammed the Stewart so she could not maneuver."

"The heat emitted by these explosives was intense. We rescued three men, one of whom was holding on to the rudder of a burning lifeboat and the other two struggling in the water trying to avoid exploding powder boxes."

"I could not help but feel proud to be among such brave and self-sacrificing officers and men. They were wonderful!"

"The Florence H. was commanded by a Capt. Butterfield, who was an Elk and well known in the Lodge on 42d st., near Times sq., in New York City. He went down with the ship."

When all the survivors had been taken from the water, they were put on board the old Stewart, which raced to the hospital at Brest at record speed.

Much has been said about the "Melting Pot" and the degree to which men of various races can be assimilated into America. As a contribution to this discussion I append a list of men who received decorations for their work on that wild night in Quiberon Bay.

The long list rank and name of vessels follows:

SILVER LIFE SAVING MEDAL

Rogers, John W., seaman, Florence H.

The total number of decorations awarded was the largest of any single enterprise of the Navy during the war. Included were 2 Congressional Medals of Honor, 2 Distinguished Service Medals, 58 Navy Crosses and 1 silver Life Saving Medal—a total of 63 decorations. In addition 70 were awards by our own Government, these the navy decorations given to our men by the Allied nations.

Tomorrow—The breath-taking story of how the Stewart—"Old Ironsides"—sank the U-168.

He Stepped Gingerly Into The Dainty, Perfumed Place

"Never mind. . . . I want you to put those drawers into the dressing table for me," Lily told him, and he stepped gingerly into the dainty, perfumed place as if he were walking on eggs or thin ice.

He stooped for a minute before the little powder table between the north window. It was littered with powder puffs, with perfume bottles, with scented hair oil, with boxes of powder, and jars of cream.

"Gosh, what do you do with all that stuff?" he asked. "It looks like the shelf in a barber shop—that little table." He laid straight blunt fingers on a gold tipped bottle.

"That's a powder table," Lily told him, laughing. "And I use all that 'stuff' as you call it, on my face. Mr. Pat Francis! Creams and perfums and powder and lipstick. The oil in that bottle you're touching is for my hair. . . . It smells like a lemon grove."

She pulled out the gold stopper and sniffed at it. "That's what makes my hair so nice and sweet," she said, smiling up at him. "Ain't all the rest of the things we use nice to look at—for my Pat to look at."

Pat groaned aloud. His head picked up a scent bottle of black glass and was looking at the price-mark pasted upon the bottom of it.

"Eighteen dollars! Whew!" He whistled. "It would take me three days of hard work to earn that one bottle of perfume for you, Lily." He set it down, his face drawn into lines of discouragement and hopelessness.

But Lily laughed at him. "Indeed I'll have to get along without perfume — or use vanilla instead. Wouldn't I, Pat?" she asked. She stood on tiptoe and kissed him on the nose, and was where she wanted to be—in his arms.

And thus it was that Carrie came upon them, a few minutes later, as she opened the open door on her way upstairs to her own room—one of the little rooms under the eaves—and each other, their lips locked, deaf and blind to everyone but themselves.

They did not see her or hear her, and she went on up stairs, leaving the locked door down and began to pack her yellow tin trunk. . . . She had exchanged her uniform for anything with the Lexingtons until Mrs. Lexington discharged her, after all, for she had not done anything, she asked herself, when the only man she had ever loved and who loved her had fallen in love with the daughter of the house?

A half hour later she walked out of the side door, leaving behind her the tin trunk and the six weeks' back pay, together with a note asking Mrs. Lexington to send both of them to her brother's house.

Pat saw her go from the window of his room above the garage and thought nothing of it.

Lily Saw Her, Too, and Knew Why She Had Gone

Lily saw her, too, and knew why she had gone. She ran downstairs and found the note she had left for Mrs. Lexington. She tore it open to find out if Carrie had written anything about herself and Pat in it. She had. . . . She had written everything she knew about them!

"Dear Mrs. Lexington," she had written, in her neat, round hand, "Miss Lily has just told me to leave the house, and I am going. She is jealous of me because Pat, the insurfear, likes me too well to suit her."

"Please send my trunk and the $96 you owe me right away to my brother's house, where I am going. His name is Charles Petrie, and his address is—"

Lily read no more.

She slipped the note into the pocket of her dress and carried it upstairs to her own room. She locked the door and carefully wrote another note in Carrie's neat hand, leaving out the bit about Pat and herself.

Then she sealed it and took it downstairs to her mother's desk. It did not occur to her that she was doing a dishonest thing—committing a forgery—writing a lie.

She smiled to herself at her own cleverness as she laid it down upon a pile of bills for her own wedding clothes—for princess slips of apple blossom pink and robin's egg blue—for silk stockings, satin slippers, paste buckles—for gloves and dressing and hats. All of it ruinent for Staley Drummond's bride!

A JAUNTY SUIT FOR A SMALL BOY

6210. The short sleeves in this pleasing model make it cool and comfortable. As here shown the waist was made of percale and the trousers of linen. One could reverse the order and have the trousers figured, checked or striped, and the vest of plain material, or the entire suit could be of a plain material with figured collar, belt and cuffs.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes 2, 3 and 4 years. To make this style for a 3 year size as illustrated will require 1¼ yards of 36 inch material for the trousers and for facings on collar, cuffs and belt, and ¼ yard of contrasting material for the vest and straps are used. It made entirely of one material 2¼ yards is required.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps. Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING AND SUMMER 1928 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

Correct Manners Explained

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In what order is the wedding processional formed? There will be a matron of honor, two bridesmaids and ushers.

1. In what order do they leave?

2. Bridesmaids and ushers walk together, do the bridesmaids hold ushers' arms?

3. How far apart should the attendants walk in the processional?

4. Do the groom and best man begin the walk to the altar as soon as the wedding march begins?

5. Do the attendants stand beside or behind the bride and groom during the ceremony?

6. If it is a double ring ceremony, who takes charge of the groom's ring until needed?

READERS.

THIS is the form of the wedding processional:

The two ushers, walking together.

Bridesmaids, walking together.

Matron of honor, walking alone.

Bride with her father or whoever is to present her in marriage.

2. The wedding processional should be formed as follows:

Bride and groom, matron of honor, walking alone; bridesmaids, walking together; ushers, walking together.

It is not correct for the maid of honor or matron of honor to walk with the best man in the recessional. Nor is it correct for the bridesmaids and ushers to walk down the aisle in pairs. This "pairing" takes away from the harmony and effectiveness of the picture, and it detracts from the spotlight that belongs to the bride and groom.

3. Not And properly they do not walk together.

4. Top ushers first, then four couples; then the bridesmaids, with Bridesmaids walking together, and the matron of honor. Then should be eight counts between the matron of honor and the bride. The bride which spread out to leward like enormous rafts, so thick were they packed. On each of these packed masses of wreckage every second cases were exploding and shooting their contents in all cases into the air like enormous blowtorches, the flames roaring from 10 to 20 feet and making a whistling noise like acetylene torches.

THE BIDDING

South, sitting in spades, correctly bids two with no response to No Trump, though holding all four aces. West bidding two spades and North failing to see spades, South doubles on the second round instead of rebidding, in order to secure his partner's best bid in case his partner cannot show normal expectancy in spades. North holding three spades assists his partner instead of showing a suit.

THE PLAY.

Trick 1. Declarer holds off to trump the third lead of diamonds in Dummy should West continue the suit.

Trick 2. Placing Declarer with ace of diamonds in view of East's discouraging play to the first trick and noting that Dummy can trump the third round, West switches and leads clubs, hoping to drive out Dummy's ace, which might be useful to Declarer to bring in Dummy's hearts after establishment of that suit.

Trick 7. With but eight trumps in the two hands, Declarer takes the double finesse.

"I shall never be happy," she said to herself, "until I recover my glove."

SYNOPSIS — After reading an ad in the Southdown Reporter and Devil's Dyke Free Press which asks the gentleman who found a lady's glove at the Dragoon's Ball to be at the Zoological Gardens Sunday, Sir Harry Doncaster twirls his tawny mustache.

When Sir Harry Doncaster returned to his room he felt again in his breast pocket of his coat, remembering that it would not be well for its contents to come under the notice of his servants in the morning. His earlier suspicions were confirmed.

The glove was gone!

Adam Scofflaw's Journal

Up and to the riddering publick library, to see whether I can finde the meaning or no of "Abracadabra!" the strange nitwit words my poor wyfe hath cried out a hundred times each daye. And finde the words listed by Sir Galfridus Grammaticus to mean "An cabalistick worde, used as a charm to bring peace and harmonie, one to another."

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for "Best Joke" published. Address "Best Joke," Boston Evening American.

Salesman—Now that you've seen all the blankets, which kind do you wish?

Lady—Well, I was only looking for a friend and didn't expect to buy.

Salesman—Well, ma'am, if you think she is in that remaining blanket up there, I'll take it down for you. LILLIAN MURPHY, 93 Cushing st., Waltham, Mass.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

THE average girl wears so little nowadays that her mother is ashamed to hang it out on the clothesline.

Ace of Cads

The selfish groom who wanted to accompany his bride on their honeymoon.

Take It or Leave It

Don't be envious when a man tells you he's just cleaned up in oil. Maybe he's a janitor in a service station.

Advice to the Love-Worn

Marriage is a school of experience from which a lot of people are playing hookey.

Yesterday's Tightwad

The miser who keeps his money under his pillow and then stays awake all night worrying about not getting any interest on it.

You're Right

Any kind of a girl will do in a clinch.

Public Improvements

The Bell System is going to make the telephone books smaller by leaving out all the wrong numbers.

Feminine Dumbbells

The girl who thought a Buddhist was a man who worked in a florist shop.

Justifiable Homicide

When your wife tells you that she worships the ground that you dig up with your golf clubs.

Our Own Vaudeville

Tom: "This is a six-day watch."

Jerry: "What do you mean, a six-day watch?"

Tom: "I pawn it on Monday and take it out on Saturday.

ONCE-OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

YOU are not pleased with some of the men you meet in your club, your lodge or your church.

Often, we wonder how these men came to be admitted.

You feel that they are far below the grade of intelligence and standing of those you think should be members of your organizations.

By what rule do you establish such an opinion?

Is it from the standpoint of their small incomes?

Quite likely this is your basis.

But it is an unfair basis upon which to judge, that of whether a man has much money or has well-paying securities.

Without knowing a man's conditions, what he has had to face, you catalogue him by his material possessions.

A shallow method of establishing the real worth of a person.

If a man aspires to membership in leading organizations and is active at church work, those are points in his favor.

He desires to mingle with the kind of men he thinks these clubs or lodges represent and he would be disappointed if he thought any of these men look upon him as you do.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE old-fashioned girl may have won men with flattery, but the feat of a modern girl's life is to avoid flattering them.

No matter what you do or say, a man, in his childlike innocence, always takes it as a compliment.

He is complimented if you tell him that you trust him—and positively thrilled if you tell him that he's dangerous."

He is frankly flattered if you say that you like to dance with him—and secretly flattered if you prefer to "sit out" the dances with him.

He is flattered if you look up to him and lean on him—and equally flattered if you baby him and mother him.

If you telephone him, you are "running after him"—and if you never telephone him, you are "just playing a waiting game."

He is flattered if you applaud him for his generosity and kindness—and more flattered if you reproach him for his "cruelty and neglect."

It always pleases him to be told that he has nice, honest eyes—and it positively delights him to be told that his eyes are wicked and inscrutable.

If nature gave him curly hair, he is grateful for the gift—but if she didn't, he thanks Heaven for the escape.

NOTHING can shake his aplomb or his self-complacency!

He is flattered if you are pleasant to him—and never flattered if you quarrel with him.

If you let him kiss you, he takes it for granted that it is because you found him irresistible—and if you don't, he suspects that you are practicing great self-denial or "just putting up a bluff."

If you admire him in evening clothes, he is highly complimented—but if you tell him that you prefer him in sport clothes, he takes it as a tribute to his manly type of beauty.

He can swallow your flattery straight or diluted, without blinking. Sarcasm and raillery roll right off his vanity like water off a slicker. Nothing penetrates, except the cheers and applause.

Never TRY to flatter a man. Just act perfectly natural—and leave the rest to HIM!

BOSTON TRADE IS FAIRLY ACTIVE

R. G. Dun & Co's Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue will say regarding trade conditions in Boston: "Retail trade continues fairly active, and a slight improvement is noted in wholesaling and manufacturing.

"Shoe factories are gradually becoming more active. In Haverhill, the larger manufacturers are operating at full capacity, and many are cold from 5 to 8 weeks ahead.

"Factories on the South Shore making mostly the men's lines are a little slow in getting under way, but are steadily increasing operations. Hides and skins have advanced, and this has stimulated the leather market.

"Prices are firm, and a fair amount of leather is moving. Tanning materials are rather slow.

"Chemicals are moving in moderate volume, but new business is light.

PAINTS ARE ACTIVE

New England building lumber is quiet, and prices are inclined to be weak. Demand for other lines is moderate. Mostly small orders are recorded for heavy building material. Paints continue active, but prices for the raw material are weak.

The wool market continues quiet, though there has been some call for the finer grades of domestic wools. The outlook for dress goods is improving, and more orders are being received for light-weight fancy worsteds.

Retailers are moving their stocks, and the general clothing situation is improving. Carpet manufacturers are buying for current needs in the raw stock. Wool prices in this country and abroad are firm.

Wool consumption showed an increase in May over that in April, but for the first five months was less than for the corresponding months of last year. Worsted yarns are selling fairly well, but knitting yarns are rather slow. Prices are steady.

IMPORTS INCREASED

Slight increases in demands for cotton goods are noted. Prices are rather irregular, and some concessions appear in print cloths. Fine goods are selling a little better, and the volume of the printed lines is fairly large. Mills are buying very little cotton at present.

Receipts of cotton in New Bedford, Fall River, Lowell and Lawrence, and Manchester, N. H., for the month of May totaled 38,813 bales, compared with 42,558 bales in May, 1927. Receipts for eleven months were 649,722 bales, compared with 879,328 a year ago and 1,253,629 two years ago. New business in cotton yarns is light, with prices easier.

Hardware is more active and machine tools are slower. Sales of pig iron during the week were light.

Imports for the port of Boston for the first six months of the year amounted to $149,400,000, compared with $146,289,000 for the corresponding period last year.

Building Contracts in New England at Record Peak

New building contracts in New England during June showed a record peak for the like week of all time, it was announced today.

Statistics on building engineering operations in New England, compiled by F. W. Dodge Corp., reviewed for the week ending July 17, 1928, and corresponding weeks in earlier years:

1928	$16,367,000	1923	$8,080,000
1927	7,268,600	1921	5,010,000
1926	8,654,800	1920	6,495,000
1925	10,149,900	1919	3,133,000
1924	12,236,500	1918	2,562,000
1922	6,229,000	1917	3,038,000

NEW ENGLAND'S BEST BUS TERMINAL PLANNED

Fall River, July 20—The New England Transportation Co. is having plans drawn for a new terminal on Pocasset st., at the corner of a proposed new thoroughfare to run north and south between Central and Pocasset sts. It will go through the Pocasset Mill property, to be developed by Louis K. Liggett of Boston and his associates. The new terminal, replacing that destroyed by fire in the conflagration of February 2, will be the finest in New England, according to plans, and will house the local offices of the company.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN BOSTON, JULY 20, 1928

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

14 Mayors

Greater Boston's Quota—DO We Need So Many?

Having given more than a year to a study of metropolitan Providence's industrial problems, Professor W. A. Bassett, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, urges the seven communities down there to get together under a SINGLE city government.

The towns and cities are Central Falls, Cranston, East Providence, Johnston, North Providence, Pawtucket and Providence.

The present Providence, 25th in population among American cities, has 267,918 inhabitants.

With 441,363 people, the NEW Providence would pass Denver, Kansas City, New Orleans, Seattle and other famous centers and stand no lower than 15th.

The Technology instructor is recognized as an expert in municipal research. The union he suggests, he believes, would save the district $1,000,000 yearly "at a most conservative estimate," and on this point he says:

"The useless duplication of city offices within one homogeneous area would vanish, and it would become possible to lay plans for the development of the metropolitan district as a unit. For, many of the people who work in Providence and Pawtucket live in the three other towns. As industrialization continues, the manufacturing centers will send their workers further and further into the other communities to reside, and the whole district will become as much one as up-town New York and down-town New York."

Exactly what we have seen and what we continue to see in Boston, which, outgrowing the limitations of its municipal boundary, has spread out into a metropolitan city—actually FOURTH IN SIZE IN THE UNITED STATES—with a population of more than 1,808,845.

Giving the weight of its approval to the "Tech" man's recommendation, the Evening Bulletin observes that:

"One city government would be cheaper than four city governments and three town governments, which the district has now. One police department would be less costly than seven. One school system would entail smaller expenses than seven school systems. One fire department would be cheaper (and infinitely more efficient) than the four municipal departments and the two dozen or more volunteer organizations that now protect the metropolitan district."

Do YOU agree?

Try to figure out the saving to all the Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayers of Greater Boston if our FOURTEEN cities and TWENTY-SIX towns were under a single city government!

Hoover—A Good Picker

His Well-Chosen Campaign Manager

DR. HUBERT WORK, SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR. HE WILL RUN THE HOOVER CAMPAIGN

The most important thing next to a good PLAN, is knowing how to pick the right man to carry out your plan.

Herbert Hoover, who was able to earn $100,000 a year as an engineer at thirty-four years of age, understands choosing men.

Here you see Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of Interior, chosen by Mr. Hoover to run his campaign for the Presidency.

You don't need to be told much about Dr. Work after you've seen his face. He is a hard worker, very intelligent, knows how to handle men, and is ABSOLUTELY TIRELESS.

In the Postoffice Department and as Secretary of the Interior he mastered every detail of the work entrusted to him.

As Secretary of the Interior he traveled tens of thousands of miles all over the country seeing for himself work being done and work that needed to be done.

The three important words in life, according to Mr. Rip-

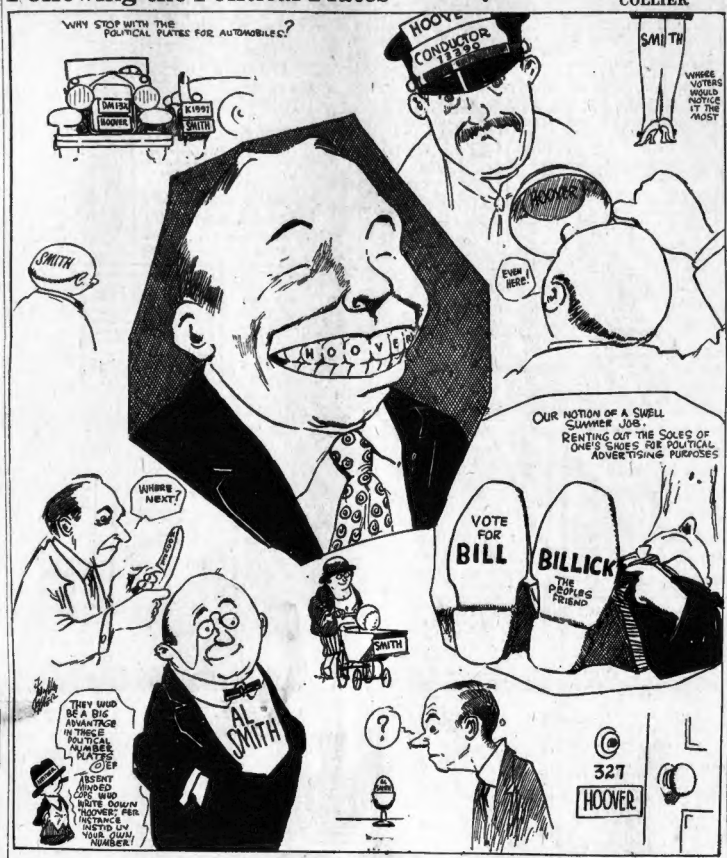
Following the Political Plates

By FRANKLIN COLLIER



LOVE IS GREATEST THING IN WORLD

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A LITTLE old lady by the name of Miss Wilkins, a school teacher, was admitted to the county hospital.

She had come in that morning and three nurses and the doctor were in her room talking over her case. The doctor was an old man of German descent, with bushy whiskers and a gruff voice.

While they were talking there was a knock at the door of the room. The head nurse opened it and there stood a little ragamuffin of a boy some 16 years of age who was barefooted, with tousled hair, and who presented a general appearance of a tatterdemalion.

"What do you want?" inquired the nurse.

"I came to see Miss Wilkins."

"Well, you can't see her now. She has just come in. She is sick. Any message?"

The boy bashfully said, "No. I just wanted to see her a few minutes. I wanted to love her."

"Well, come back after a while, tomorrow, and perhaps you can see her."

The doctor had overheard the conversation and said, "Hold on a minute. Let the boy come in."

The boy was ushered in and the doctor asked him what he wanted. He said, "I don't want nuthin' but just to love her a few minutes. I ain't got nuthin' to give her, but I love her better than anybody else and I didn't know out what that would do some good."

The doctor turned and dismissed the nurses. Then he said to the boy, "Go ahead."

The boy fell down on his knees by the bed and took hold of Miss Wilkins' hand and bowed his head upon it. The doctor quietly stepped out of the room.

In about a half-hour the boy came out.

"What did you do?" said the doctor.

"I didn't do nuthin' 'cep' just loved her. She is the best woman I ever knowed. She is the first person that ever treated me like a human being, so I wanted to do somethin' for her."

"All right," said the doctor. "You can come back about this time tomorrow, if you want to."

The boy went away and the nurses returned. They looked inquiringly at the doctor. He pulled at his whiskers awhile and then said, "I have been trying an interesting experiment. I guess you might call it the love cure. We doctors of any sense know we can't cure people. We can produce some effects with drugs or surgery, but what makes people get well is still a mystery. I suppose it is nature or God or something which we don't know anything about. So you do your part in nursing and care and it all may help some. But this love business is the strongest force in the world. It is the force that brings life in the first place and I suppose that it heals life. When you make a gash in a tree the tree makes a scar for it and covers it up. When anything goes wrong with us nature goes to work in her own way to try to remedy the disease. Something cures people. Some say it is faith, some say it is God. Some say it is some fake medicine and some say it is scientific knowledge, but none of us know. This boy has got hold of the greatest thing in the world, which is love. We will see what it can do."

They found Miss Wilkins indisputably brighter and freer from pain. Somehow she got well.

"Whether it was the love that made her get well or not, I do not know," said the doctor. "But I know we are all trying to find out what the healing force in nature is. Maybe this boy had it. I wouldn't say that love can cure anything, but I will say that it is about as successful a cure as any I know about."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WE bring so much misery on ourselves because we won't take life as it comes.

We build romantic theories of what life should be—

We make sentimental pictures of how people should feel—

We outline lovely scenarios for our own reactions—

Then along comes life and it all goes blooey.

Things don't turn out as we thought they would—

People refuse to feel as we expected them to feel—

And we, ourselves, jump the schedule in the most amazing way.

Everything's a mess. And, of course, we blame everything but our own silly selves.

We blame God and Society and our husbands and wives and friends and neighbors and in-laws.

We feel that we have been tricked and mistreated. We are sure that if things had been managed differently—if people had played fair with us—everything would have turned out as we had planned.

The simple truth is that Life is too big for our plans. Life involves too many other jobs, too many other natures, too many other experiments, to yield itself to our small formula.

Life has much to give us, but it must give it to us in its own way, and its own good time. And we only muddle things when we try to grab the wheel.

The great trick in living is to take life as it comes.

Face reality.

Don't decide beforehand what life is going to be or what other people are going to do—or even what you yourself, is going to do.

Keep your mind open and your shirt on.

Do the best you can to make a sane, healthy plan for yourself—associate as far as possible with decent, reliable people—pick a wholesome environment.

Then take things as they come.

They won't come as you've planned—that's a cinch.

But if you haven't built up a lot of foolish anticipations, you won't be disappointed, resentful and hysterical.

Your heart may ache, but your mind will be free. You will be able to see things honestly and act fairly.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 20—Thoughts while strolling: The negro taxi driver with a gold ring in his ear. Oscar Shaw's teeth. Elizabeth Marbury, who doesn't like it spelled with a "z." And who is past 70 and who smokes exactly five cigarettes a day. Well, well!

The red-haired mother with three red-haired daughters who are all on the stage. Chic Sale in from Scarsdale loafing in front of a drug store. Just a country boy Sign: "Day and night lipsticks." Jay R. House, a Topeka, Kan., boy who made good in the city.

James Montgomery Flagg's eyelashes. Pirie McDonald, the photographer, who charges of $100 a sitting —photos extra. Why are all the beautiful girls hanging on the arms of ugly men? Three squads of motorcycle cops. If it is another filler I won't look.

Girls who try to appear languid like Greta Garbo. And look like—well, you cannot blame gals for trying. Could you go for that suit?—green with a pronounced pink stripe. Still, I suppose some people look at all of us and hide a grin.

Magnificent establishments featuring "table luxuries" with clerks in frock coats. Mrs. E. M. Statler, widow of the hotel man. Cafes that try to appeal to the "haut monde" with menus in French only. Those expansive furniture store windows showing completely equipped rooms.

Ray Long really enjoying it. I remember—but no matter. Boys wearing snow white Alpine hats with dinner clothes. Actors resting on their dignity until the fall stampede. The iron-studded doors where knowing raps bring an alcoholic saturnalia of hospitality. And headaches.

Calliope auto horns. Paris styles in New York windows before the tourists get home. What sort of a racket it that?—a man standing on a high window ledge blowing a bugle. Probably his wife locked him out. Anything can happen on this mad little isle.

A HANDSOME Broadway leading man is the owner of 46 canaries, all named for stage celebrities, and he can call each by name. Canary calling at its zenith.

HANDSOME leading men are often a disappointment in ordinary light. There is one who resembles George Ade's hero who lost the settings out of his face. One of the most famous had a protruding myopic eye. Two are completely outfitted with store teeth. And still another in a low collar looks as though he had tried to swallow a doorknob and it stuck in his gullet.

THE salary of a handsome leading man, I am told, averages $750 a week. That is if single. If married his drawing power among matinee worshippers is not so hot and he must be content with something measly like $500.

OUT-OF-TOWN visitors are attracted by noon day lunchers who have their picnic lunch spread on the graves of Trinity Church yard. The lunchers are mostly young clerks and stenographers from neighboring office buildings in the down town district. Many romances develop from this al fresco contact.

IT cost New York $16,000 to clean up the last mess of confetti throwers who filled lower Broadway with torn up directories and such in honor of the latest fliers. More than 1500 tons of scrap paper were hurled out the skyscraper windows. A big city's rather pathetic idea of high jinks.

UNLESS one has driven on aeroplane he has no conception what ever of speed, announces a New York aviator. Our experience, however, in crossing a two-acre lot ahead of a pouting bull has furnished us with a rough idea.

William A. Grozier

He Helped to Build a Fine Newspaper

The late William A. Grozier, whose death at his home in Melrose has brought profound sorrow to the circle of his intimates, became business-manager of the Boston Post when that now prosperous and powerful journal, under the brilliant leadership of his lamented brother, was beginning to make a place for itself.

The public heard but little of "E. A." Grozier, founder of the Post, as it is known to the present generation, and much less of his able brother, in the "front office." How well and intelligently they both labored, however, may be seen in the splendid newspaper now so capably directed by son and nephew.

A home and family man of retiring disposition, Mr. Grozier was not widely known outside of his newspaper connection; in the office of the Post, he was everybody's friend, and all were his friends.

To the members of Mr. Grozier's family, and to all who have been associated with him in the making of the Post, The Boston Evening American offers its deepest sympathy.

ley, once president of the Santa Fe Railroad, are ORGANIZE, DEPUTIZE, SUPERVISE. That means organize the enterprise, deputize wisely by entrusting the carrying out of plans to the right men and SUPERVISE TO MAKE SURE THAT IT'S DONE.

Hoover and Work are both ORGANIZE, DEPUTIZE, SUPERVISE men. With Dr. Work in charge there will be no shilly-shallying about this Hoover campaign, and it's only a kindness to the Democrats to tell them so.
